Pass Reform Bill

SPRINGFIELD – A bill requiring registering voters to show social security or taxpayers' identification numbers for registration passed the Senate yesterday and now goes to the House.

The bill, sponsored by John A. Graham, R-Barrington, is intended to help identify persons who are challenged at the polls. The Senate vote was 31-17.

Ike Still 'Critical'

WASHINGTON— Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower remained in "critical" condition late yesterday with "evidences of congestive heart failure (persisting) despite the fact that all appropriate therapeutic measures are being taken."

The late report from Walter Reed Army Medical Center said, "Failure to respond is considered as an unfavorable prognostic sign."

Call U.N. Session

The U. N. Security Council is expected to meet this morning for the first time since last December after yesterday's Israeli bombing which Jordan claims killed 18 civilians and wounded 25.

Israel conceded its planes entered Jordan but said they attacked a commando camp, not a civilian center.

Charges 'Politics'

SPRINGFIELD – Democratic politicians reacting to Gov. Richard Ogilvie's local government message said yesterday he has "chosen political power rather than effective government as his goal."

Senate Minority Leader Thomas McGloon said the governor's special message yesterday was the "most disappointing" in memory.

Debt Hike Okayed

WASHINGTON – A $12 billion increase in the national debt was approved by the Senate yesterday. It's enough to head off a mid-April fiscal crisis but is still short of the cushion requested by President Nixon.

The bill boosts the "temporary" debt to $337 billion, enough to allow the government to pay its bills for another year.

Woman Gets Post

SPRINGFIELD – Mrs. Sharon Harker of Eureka yesterday was named superintendent of the county fair division of the Illinois Agricultural Department. She is the first woman to head a division in that department.

Her division is responsible for distributing state funds to agricultural and industrial fairs throughout the state.

Charges Rickover

WASHINGTON – Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover yesterday was charged with persecuting nuclear submarine officers under his command. The charge was made by Charles Gubser, R-California, at a session of the House Armed Services Committee.

He charged that the treatment is causing some officers to leave the service. Rickover, who was present, did not have the opportunity to reply.

View Mosquito Problem

Disconnection of Palatine from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD) is not considered the solution to the village's mosquito problems.

That's the conclusion of a special village committee appointed to investigate the reason behind swarms of the pesty insects plaguing the village last summer.

In its 16-page report, the group said it would not be advisable to disconnect or dissolve the district.

"A great deal more interest and support would be necessary to accomplish this action properly," it was explained.

BUT BASED on the conclusion that taxes have been paid toward a "mosquito abatement program that has become ineffective and is operated as a temporary control program," the committee said a legal tax protest would be in order.

The committee further recommends that fogging (a temporary control measure) of the adult mosquito be done only upon request of village officials.

Study by Palatine's committee, which is headed by Mrs. Clayton Brown, has included attendance at six of the past eight monthly meetings of NMAD and three meetings with Judge Harry Comerford, who is responsible for appointing trustees to the district.

IN ADDITION, the group has done research into recognized effective control methods of mosquitoes. The members also requested financial and activity reports from NMAD.

The report emphasized Palatine's committee made 11 official requests for a treasurer's report before it was received.

So the group also is recommending an investigation by the Better Government Association with regard to finance reports.

Other recommendations to Palatine's village board include:

—Legislation to amend the Mosquito Abatement Act regarding the manner by which appointments are made to the board.

—A request from the village and township government to NMAD for minutes of monthly meetings.

—Appointment by the village of an "observer" to attend meetings of NMAD and request the League of Women Voters also to appoint an "observer."

—The village and township government should request exact information as to the agency responsible for mosquito abatement operations of creeks, streams, rivers, natural lakes and reservoirs.

—The report made by the Palatine committee be made available to all municipalities in NMAD.

A BASIC conclusion of the committee is that there is no control over actions of the mosquito district.

"Until there is some legislation to correct the method by which trustees are selected to serve on this board, we have a form of taxation without representation," the committee reported.

Palatine's village board decided to schedule a committee-of-the-whole session in order to thoroughly review the lengthy report and discuss future official action.

Trustee Wendell Jones said, "The committee is to be commended for such a thorough analysis of the problem."

Other members of the mosquito committee include Richard Dawson, Palatine director of environmental health; Mrs. Martha Loss, Dist. 15 director of health services; and Earl Dailey, a research chemist for Charles Bruning Co. Township Supervisor Howard Olsen also participated in the group's study.

Tribute to a Marine...

FUNERAL SERVICES WERE held Tuesday for a Palatine Marine who was killed in Vietnam early this month. Pfc. David B. Arnold, a graduate of Paddock Elementary and Fremd High School, was buried at Concordia Cemetery in Forest Park. Services were held at Immanuel Lutheran Church. A Marine color guard saluted as the 19-year-old's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Arnold, were escorted into the Church.

Sing-Out at Viator

Sing-Out Palatine will perform on April 18 and 20 at St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights, as part of "Up With People" week, April 13 to 20.

The performances will be from 8 to 10 p.m. and 3 to 5 p.m., respectively, with an admission charge of $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. Children are free.

The singing group will help bring to the Northwest suburbs the ideals of "Up With People" through "positive oriented songs."

Sing-Out Palatine was organized in March, 1967, and has grown in membership from 10 to more than 80. In February, a board of officials was elected and a constitution was written.

DURING THE past few months, the group has performed at Niles College, at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, and the American Legion in Arlington Heights.

Since their organization, members of the group have performed the World Sing-Out Festival in New Rochelle, N. Y., at the Conrad Hilton Hotel and Sherman House, and Antoine's Restaurant, in Chicago, and many churches, school groups, chambers of commerce and other functions in the area.

The local group, the first Up With People singing group in the state, is part of a 50,000-member national organization, whose members have performed around the nation, toured Italy and the Congo, and performed on television and made recordings.

Those wishing additional information are asked to call or write Sing-Out Palatine, Post Office Box 422, or call 358-2985.

Surplus Funds Vote Tuesday

Voters at the annual Palatine Town meeting Tuesday will be asked to approve payments of $28,000 for mental health, $14,000 for School District 15, and $950 for the leisure club. The amounts were recommended Tuesday night at a Palatine Township board meeting.

Revised figures showed $42,950.84 as the surplus and $171,086.84 in estimated township receipts.

Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said the voters would be asked to approve $11,000 each for the Clearbrook Center and Northwest Community Mental Health clinic and $6,000 for Countryside Center.

THESE FIGURES were in keeping with the suggestion of the Palatine Township Mental Health Advisory Committee. However, the committee said that the recommendation was made "on the basis of existing funds, and the committee was unanimous in their expression of disappointment at the amount allocated for mental health."

The original budget called for over $18,000 each for Northwest Community and Clearbrook and over $8,000 for Countryside, a total mental health budget of $45,986. This budget was described as "more realistic in view of the actual mental health needs in the township."

Mrs. Lynn Rogers, on behalf of the Leisure Club for Senior Citizens, suggested a budget of $1,290.

The board also approved the estimated road budget of $191,000.

Set Girls-Fathers 'Pow-Wow' Program

A "Pow-Wow" for first and second grade girls and their fathers interested in the Countryside YMCA Indian Princess program, will be held tomorrow at 7:15 p.m., at the Fire Hall on Slade Street in Palatine.

Chuck Simon, coordinating chairman of the program, said that fathers and daughters from the "Y" will help initiate the newcomers. Simon pointed out that the program has grown to 15 tribes in two months.

THE MAIN objective of Indian Princess is to bring father and daughter closer together and strengthen the relationship between them. Monthly meetings of the tribes will be planned, Simon stated. Interested persons are asked to call the "Y" at 359-2400, if they cannot attend the Pow-Wow.

...May Continue Through Memorial

Board members of the Palatine Community Council will recommend to the entire council next week that a Vietnam memorial be established in the community to honor local men who have died in the Vietnam war.

Mrs. Samuel LaSusa of the community council said a special meeting will be called next week, probably Wednesday, when the suggestion will be presented to the entire council.

Mrs. LaSusa and other board members met Monday and agreed that a memorial should be established. They were unable to agree, however, on the kind of memorial that would be most appropriate.

TWO SUGGESTIONS were a room in the proposed new Palatine Public Library and a portable band shell for the Palatine Village Band.

Estimated cost of the band shell, which would be used for numerous village functions in addition to concerts, is $15,000. The shell is equipped with lights and acoustical facilities.

The band shell was suggested, Mrs. LaSusa said, because music is associated with young people and because it would become a living memorial — something used rather than something that's merely dedicated and put aside.

The community council's action was prompted by the recent death of Marine Pfc. David B. Arnold, of 515 W. Palatine Road, and by a column in the Herald calling for a memorial to Palatine Township Vietnam casualties.

Pfc. Arnold was the third Palatine youth to die in Vietnam in the past four months. Nearly 10 Palatine Township boys have been killed since the war began.

ARNOLD'S family — Mr. and Mrs. Otto Arnold — requested that donations be made to the Palatine Township Youth Organization in lieu of flowers for their son.

Arnold was a graduate of Stuart Paddock Elementary School and Fremd High School.

He had been in Vietnam since late last year.

Last November, Ralph R. Carpenter, a graduate of Palatine High School, was killed in the war and in December, John A. Blanco, a graduate of St. Theresa Elementary School and Notre Dame High School, was killed in a plane crash in the war.

ALMOST LIKE homemade, the fresh and warm baked goods from local bakeries in the area draw scores of customers everyday who smell the sweet fragrances early in the morning from ovens that have been going since 2 a.m.

Bakers Help Make Life Richer

by MARTHA KOPER

It takes more than sugar and flour to bake that warm fresh sweet roll you eat in the morning on the way to the train or at the office.

It takes someone getting up in the middle of the night, mixing, molding, and baking in order to have a wide selection of high-calorie breakfasts awaiting the morning crowd that jams our local bakeries as early as 6 a.m.

Shops where fresh baked goods always can be found in the suburban area are not crying for business.

There's something magic about walking into a local bakery and knowing because of the sweet fragrance that the sweet rolls just came out of the oven. Local bakers know this too.

That's why they're in business and why they have become accustomed to working while their customers sleep.

AT THE PALATINE Pastry Shop, Joseph Seidl arrives at his store on Slade Street every morning about 2 a.m. He doesn't leave until three in the afternoon.

"It's nice to be going out at night when everybody else is asleep," he joked.

"After all, that's a baker's life."

And Seidl, who has made his living in a bakery for the past 32 years, certainly knows what a baker's life is like.

Bakers from other local stores closely follow Seidl's routine. Whether they begin work at midnight or 3 a.m. they end up working almost as many hours.

For an obvious reason, bakery owners make sure all their food is fresh in the morning. That's when the sweet fragrance is irresistible.

The majority of Seidl's customers from 6 to 9 a.m. are commuters rushing to the train, but with always enough time to stop at his little shop for a roll or doughnut.

"THAT'S WHY WE have to start baking at 2 a.m.," he said.

A baker's life means many long and unusual hours, but it also means enjoying the work.

"We have to like it, don't we?" asked a baker who specializes in decorating cakes.

There are all types of skills involved in a baker's job. Some of them come easier with years of experience.

Take Charles Danegger of Arlington Heights, who owns the Danegger Pastry Shop located in Arlington Market. He's been in the business for more than 35 years and can decorate a big wedding cake in less than a half hour.

His shop is a true family operation with his wife and son working many hours a day too. In fact, it's a third generation business since Danegger's father began in the bakery business before the turn of the century.

MRS. DANEGGER admits she never dreamed of becoming so closely associated with bakeries, but has no regrets.

"It's interesting work and we meet so many different people," she said.

It's a good feeling to step into a store and have the person behind the counter know what you want.

Indeed most customers know what they want too, because they frequently come just for the "specialty of the house."

At the Palatine Pastry Shop, customers are offered a choice of several German baked goods. As a matter of fact, Seidl started in the trade as a boy living in Germany.

When he came to the United States in the mid-1950's he quickly learned there is a difference between European and American baking.

"AMERICANS WANT everything a little richer," he smiled, "and everything has to look nice."

In Europe, the customers don't care too much about how the food looks, as long as it tastes good," he explained.

"When we bake American, we use more butter," Seidl smiled.

But maybe it's the frequent visits to local bakeries and not the butter that makes Americans look like the best-fed population of the world.

Swimming, Camping Tops

(This is the third article in a series on the new Countryside YMCA's progress in its first year.)

YMCAs probably are more closely associated with swimming and camping than any other recreational activity, and the new Countryside YMCA is no exception.

Even though it's only a year old and has no facilities of its own yet, the Countryside YMCA offers a complete swimming program at several "borrowed" pools and a more-that-complete camping program is planned for this summer.

According to Mrs Roberta Turcotte, program director and chairman of the swimming program, the YMCA is offering swimming programs for children who have never been swimming, for teens and advanced children swimmers and for adults

SWIMMING FACILITIES at St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights and at Elgin Academy in Elgin are being used by the YMCA

Attesting to the success of the swim program were the results of swim team competition among Chicago area YMCAs. Countryside won several trophies, despite the fact that it doesn't have its own facilities and is less than a year old.

Adult programs are not as vigorous as the swim team activity, but women in the swim class know they've had a work out after class and men who participate in the Y Indian Guides swim program have a tough time keeping up with their sons.

But as extensive as the swimming program at the new YMCA, this summer's camping program lights up more eyes on the YMCA staff.

Four types of camping will be offered to youngsters in the Countryside area.

THE FIRST, a day camp, will be for children who have completed first grade. It will be held at Camp Duncan near Volo, Ill., and will offer many activities not offered at most day camps, including boating and swimming.

A special eight-day resident camp for boys and girls who have never camped before will be held between June 20 and 28.

A limit of 75 boys and 75 girls between 8 and 12 years will be allowed to attend.

The third program is the regular camp session and Countryside youngsters may attend one of several YMCA camps in the Chicago area.

THE FOURTH PROGRAM is the one that draws the most interest among the YMCA staff. An interracial camp, for 50 white boys, 50 black boys and 50 Spanish-speaking boys aged 8 to 13 will be held at Camp Duncan. Three sessions are scheduled, beginning June 30.

Complete information about the swimming and camping programs may be obtained by calling the YMCA office at 359-2400.

Almost a Repeat? Corra's Close

Rolling Meadows Fire Chief Tom Fogerty was called to Corra Plumbing, 5110 Tollview, Tuesday night following a report that a salamander (heater) was going full blast

Fogerty called the unit — similar to the one believed to have started the King's Walk apartment fire in Rolling Meadows Monday night — a fire hazard and ordered it turned off

Corra is building a warehouse and offices at the site. A mason laying bricks this afternoon turned on the outdoor heater because he didn't want the mortar to freeze.

Fogerty said high winds made the heater an increased danger.

Camps At Eagle Cave

Boy Scout Troop 209 of Palatine camped at Eagle Cave, Wis., last weekend, enjoying cooking, cave exploring and hiking in the surrounding natural park

The 26 boys were accompanied by nine adult leaders. Supervising the scouts was Bill Pankey. The cave and natural park will be the site of a Midwest Scout Jamboree in August.

Boards at Full Strength

Palatine's government advisory bodies have been brought to full strength with announcement of two appoints by Village Pres. John Moodie.

He recommended James Bennett, public works director, for appointment to the plan commission and Thomas LaDore as the seventh member of the zoning board of appeals.

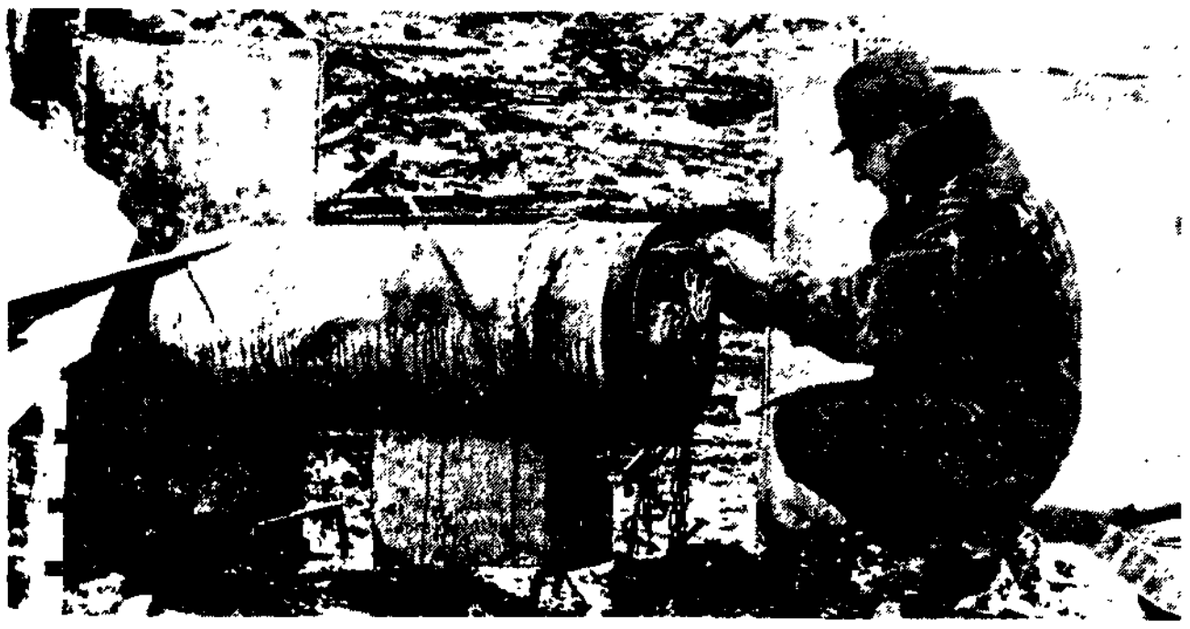
With approval from the board of trustees, the appointments bring both groups to full membership for the first time in almost a year.

Serving as the village's public works director for the past four years, Bennett brings much construction knowledge to the plan commission. Before coming to Palatine in 1965, he was director of Wheeling's public works and building departments.

PRIOR TO becoming a municipal employe, he owned a construction company. He is a graduate of Washburn Trade School in Chicago and has taken courses in municipal public works administration.

A resident of Palatine since 1964, LaDore is a member of the Kemmerly Real Estate staff. Before joining the real estate business, he was in the sales division of S. A. Hirsh Manufacturing Co. of Skokie.

LaDore and his wife Geneva have six children and live at 532 Burno Drive in the Pleasant Hill area.



MALFUNCTION of this butane-fed temporay space heater may have started the King's Walk apartment fire, says Harry Schaeffer, deputy state fire marshal, who has asked the manufacturer to run tests on the salamanders.

Committee OKs Solicitor Bills

Legislation that would permit municipalities to control door-to-door solicitors was reported out of the municipalities committee of the Illinois House of Representatives yesterday with the recommendation that it be passed.

Two bills, HB 107 and 108, were introduced in the current session of the legislature by Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, granting local government the power to license and regulate direct sellers, a power heretofore denied municipalities by the state government.

THE SCHLICKMAN bills would permit direct sellers to either "register with the Department of Registration and Education or be subject to any municipal licensing or regulation."

The department is authorized to revoke or suspend solicitor permits based on certain guidelines, the same guidelines set down for municipalities.

Supporting the legislation in testimony before the municipalities committee were Steve Sargent, executive director of the Illinois Municipal League, Robert Van Deusen and Wayne Anderson, managers of Glenview and Evanston, Harold Ross of Field Enterprises and Ernest Wittle, plant manager for the Avon Co.

In other action yesterday, Gov. Richard Ogilvie delivered a nine-point special message on local government, each point of which will be provided with enabling legislation.

The fifth point of the message, of particular interest to the suburban Northwest, would enable municipalities to annex immediately contiguous territory without having to go through special elections.

CURRENT LAW requires that towns abide by the decision of property owners in the territory, with a 51 per cent favorable vote being required for annexation of areas larger than 60 acres.

A bill introduced yesterday by Schlickman would permit the courts to decide if a piece of property should be included within the corporate boundaries of a municipality.

Petitions for involuntary annexation would have to ensure that regional plans are satisfied and that full municipal services, including water, sewer, fire and police protection, are available for the area to be annexed.

The bill was referred for hearing to the house municipalities committee.

Hall Open Saturdays For Absentee Ballots

The Palatine Village Hall will be open every Saturday from now until the local election on April 15.

Residents who will be out of town on the day of election may vote by absentee ballot from 9 a.m. to noon on the coming Saturdays.

Village Deputy Clerk Mrs. June Boston said because she has received so many calls about absentee ballots the decision was made to have office hours on Saturdays.

Originally, the Village Hall was going to be open for absentee voting only the Saturday before the election on April 12.

Sewer Repairs

A sewer under Oriole Street settled off grade, and residents at 2605 were out of service temporarily.

Rolling Meadows public works department had to hire Rosetti Construction Co. to make emergency line repairs.

Supt. James McFeggan said the continued pounding of traffic on the street may have caused the underground line to finally settle with a back pitch.

Complains of Driver Using Lawn as Road

Mrs. J. Zurawski, 524 S. Allen, Palatine, told police that a vehicle drove across her front lawn causing ruts in her yard.

Mrs. Zurawski said the car came off Echo Lane and crossed to Elm Street This has happened on three occasions, but this is the first time she has reported the incident, she said.

Upon investigation, police also found ruts on the lawn of Mrs. Zurawski's neighbor, Salvortie Tomaso, who lives at 555 Echo Lane.

Church Organ Recital Scheduled for Sunday

A special Lenten organ recital will be held at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Palatine Sunday.

Organists from three local churches will perform, cindlugin Donald Kendrick, St. Philip's Episcopal Church; Kenneth Spengler, Christ Lutheran Church and Drew Rutz of Immanuel Lutheran.

SELECTIONS include "Fanfare" by Lemmens, "Fugue in 9" by Bach, "Rock of Ages" by Bingham, "The Cross, Our True and Only Hope" by Penick, "Two Chorales" by Brahms, and "Praeludium" by Pachelbel.

The recital begins at 3 p.m. in Immanuel Lutheran Church on N. Plum Grove Road and Wood Street.

Y Invites Group-Use of Swim Facilities

The Countryside YMCA has invited youth groups in the area to use swimming facilities at Elgin Academy from 8:15 to 9:15 p.m., Thursday.

This is an extension of Family Swim, held on that day, which has proven popular with "Y" members.

Among the groups invited to use the Elgin Academy facilities, are the Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and Church Youth Groups. Interested groups may call the "Y" at 359-2400, for further information.

"FOOD FOR THE HUNGRY Week" has been proclaimed by Mayor Dan Congreve for March 28 to April 4. Participating in the project is the Elk Grove Township Teen Age Republican (TARS), asking for foodstuffs to be dropped at 17 locations. Making a poster for the drive is Jed Scherkenbach, 800 S. Maple Drive, Mount Prospect.

Auditors Line up 4 Budgets

Township officials explained and clarified four annual budgets Tuesday to a handful of residents.

A total of $27,800 is budgeted for the general assistance fund which includes funds for food, rent, hospitalization and institutional care.

Supervisor Albert C. Peters said this fund, which covers "anything and everything a qualified person might need," is about double the amount actually spent last year.

Citing the possibility of unforeseen disaster or tragedies, Peters said the nature of this fund demands over budgeting.

CEMETERY FUNDS are up this year to $9,175. The bulk of the money, $4,000, is slated for water main installation.

In the past, water for the grounds was carried in by bucket. Peters said the current availability of nearby water facilities prompted officials to plan the installation this year.

A total of $151,350 for the town fund includes $15,500 for necessary election expenses. The township slate is elected at one time for a four-year period.

Compensation for the board of auditors came under close scrutiny from auditor candidates Fred Reimann and Ron Wittmeyer.

The current rate of pay is $15 per meeting and auditors tentatively budgeted a similar amount on next year's budget, pending the outcome of legislation scheduled to come before the state legislature soon. The new bill would enable auditors to obtain a maximum of $25 per meeting.

REIMANN MADE a motion that the amount budgeted for compensation be increased from $1,500 to $2,000 but withdrew it after township attorney Richard Cowen explained that there is currently a conflict in the statutes concerning compensation.

"If there is no action by the legislature this week on the new bill, my recommendation to the board will be to allow the electors at next week's town meeting to vote on the proposed increase to $25," he said.

Once set — by the auditors this week if the bill is successful or by residents next week — the compensation rate cannot be changed for four years when a new board is elected.

After all budgets are approved at the April 1 town meeting, it is expected that $19,000 in surplus funds will be voted to the general assistance and cemetery budgets. Remainder of the surplus, some $251,000, will be allocated to eligible groups in the township.

Auditors will recommend next Tuesday that not less than $150,000 go to township elementary school districts. The total of $83,760 suggested by the township mental health board for five area agencies, was agreed to by auditors for vote at the town meeting.

THE MENTAL health groups asked for $98,000 but the township board said the amount is impossible this year. Board members spoke to all groups and took funds available from other sources and number of case loads in the township into consideration before recommending allocations.

After meeting with historical society members from Arlington Heights and Wheeling, auditors recommended that $4,500 be slated for each group.

Over 50 clubs for senior citizens in three areas submitted proposed budgets for their work and the auditors' recommendation will be $3,100 for Buffalo Grove, $2,200 for Arlington Heights and $2,400 for Wheeling.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus, township auditor now running for supervisor, said the needs of each group were met. She said the board made allowances for dues, other expected income and unexpended balances before making final decision. The three groups may ask under law for $10,000.

HISTORICAL societies may also receive $10,000 but Mrs. Kolerus said that since schools were receiving less than last year and senior citizens receiving less than $10,000, auditors "felt it was fair" to reduce slightly the historical groups' share.

James Ryan, attorney for highway commissioner Lawrence Carrozza, presented excerpts from the road and bridge budget of $344,900.

Of this amount, $120,000 must go to municipalities. Ryan said increases this year reflect higher costs and additional mileage added during the year to the road commissioner's duties.

Expansion of Nursing Program Is Urged

William Griffin, a Caucus Party candidate for trustee in Arlington Heights, has urged an expansion of the village's nursing program.

He stressed that expansion might be accomplished through cooperation with Northwest Community Hospital, which is planning to move into a federally-funded program of extended home nursing through medicare. Griffin urged village cooperation and support for that program.

He also praised the village nurse Mrs. Joan Hoch who carries a case load of over 60 patients: "By the end of each day, this woman has paid for herself many times over because of her devotion to her professional calling."

GRIFFIN IS AN administrator at Augustana Hospital in Chicago.

He also urged extension of the sanitarian's role in the industrial area: "Through inspections and recommendations we can avoid many problems on a preventive basis rather than seeking a cure after it is too late."

Griffin said he has been impressed by the village's food handling inspections and cleanup of railroad litter.

Palatine Savings Plans Style Show

Palatine Savings and Loan Association will hold a novel fashion show in the building lobby this Saturday at 10 a.m.

In announcing the unique event, Mrs. Vera Brockington, secretary of the S&L, said it was intended to brighten up the spring season as well as celebrate the association's 13th anniversary.

Palatine Savings was founded April 1, 1956, and is now the village's largest financial institution with over $22 million in assets.

MODELS FOR THE fashion show, Mrs. Brockington stated, are three young ladies on the S&L's staff. They will display sportswear, casuals, afternoon dresses, slack suits and pant dresses from the new Muriel Mundy Shop in Palatine.

Mrs. Brockington extended an invitation to gentlemen as well as ladies to see the show. "It's open to everyone," she said, "not just our customers."

by United Press International

Today is Thursday, March 27, the 86th day of 1969 with 279 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury and Mars.

The evening stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1513 Ponce de Leon discovered the East Coast of Florida in his search for the Fountain of Youth.

In 1933 Japan resigned from the League of Nations.

In 1941 Regent Prince Paul of Yugoslavia was removed from office after agreeing to a military and economic pact with the Axis Powers.

In 1962 President Frondizi of Argentina was deposed as military forces took over his country.

A thought for the day: Roman poet Horace said, "As riches grow, care follows, and a thirst for more and more."

Seek to Put Roads in Building Code for Fire Prevention

Extra safety precautions will be asked of major builders in Rolling Meadows, in an accelerated fire prevention campaign

City officials, shocked by three costly fires in a month, are seeking measures to cut the hazards and improve fire fighting efficiency

Mayor Roland J Meyer Tuesday night instructed the ordinances and judiciary committee to present at the April 8 council meeting an amendment to the building code which will forbid construction above the foundation level until a project is completely surrounded with a passable service road

Fire trucks Monday night could not reach the southern parts of the King's Walk Apartments

ADDITIONAL hydrants were available along unpaved Euclid Avenue, a road the county highway department is expected to pave this summer

The wind-whipped flames might have prevented action on the south side of the project, "but if the wind had been in the other direction it would have been disastrous," said the mayor.

Hydrants at the King's Walk Apartments, and at Three Fountains where there was a $700,000 fire Feb 21, were in working order, but the mayor wants the building code to spell out that hydrants must be tested and found in working order before construction rises above the foundation level.

People in Plum Grove Countryside who fought the King's Walk Apartments fire had come to think "it was becoming a beautiful project," said Ald. Tom Scanlan who lives in the subdivision.

HE RECOMMENDED that builders hire security guards, particularly at construction stages where buildings are highly susceptible to fire damage

"Buildings under construction offer shelter to vagrants and to adventurous youngsters," he said

A watchman was employed at King's Walk, but reportedly he had gone home to warm up when the fire started.

In the interim, while the amendments are being drafted, the mayor has instructed George Konchar, building officer, to meet with the superintendent on the Willow Bend project and request installation of the road base so police can patrol and there will be access for fire equipment.

TRACING THE CAUSE of the fire which destroyed a major portion of King's Walk apartments Monday, Harry Schaeffer, deputy state fire marshal, and Rolling Meadows Fire Chief Tom Fogarty paused in the ruins to evaluate their findings.

The Way We See It

Back 'Hunger Hike'

The "Hunger Hike" between Park Ridge and Rolling Meadows on Good Friday deserves the full support of all residents of the Northwest suburbs.

Hopefully, thousands of marchers, many of them young people, will wind their way through the suburbs in a dramatic gesture aimed at raising funds for three projects.

Backers of the march hope to obtain $120,000 to be distributed to the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows, the relief project in Biafra, and an agricultural project in Equador.

The locally-oriented Community Center can receive as much as $40,000 as a result of a successful fund drive

The 16-mile trek has received the endorsement of many groups and individuals.

The League of Women Voters has endorsed the idea, as have local state representatives, village officials and chambers of commerce.

Success of the march now hinges on support given to the hikers by local businessmen and residents. Each marcher must be sponsored in order to participate, although no set amount has been established for the donation. Sponsors may contribute as much as $10,000 per mile, or just 10 cents.

The use of masses of people to force an issue or rouse interest is certainly not a new idea. Marches for peace, for war and for the whole range of human behavior have been conducted throughout the country.

But few of these marches can match the potential impact of the Good Friday walk through the suburbs.

The young men and women who take to the suburban streets will be dramatizing the agony of hunger to one of the most affluent sections of the nation.

Hunger is as prevalent today as it has ever been. It is found in Ecuador and Biafra, where part of the proceeds of the march will be sent.

But hunger and poverty also exist in the suburbs, in the overlooked portions of the county where families live in trailers amid the weeds and vermin of farms halfway on the road to becoming cities.

Hunger resides with people who have been forgotten in the terrible competition for jobs and status in the suburbs.

The young men and women who walk the 16 miles on Good Friday will be like a moving admonition, a reminder that the lonely corners of the county are a reflection of the type of environment millions of people live in daily.

The distance from Ecuador to Biafra to the Northwest suburbs can be measured in a span of 16 miles, and in the measured steps of thousands of marchers walking in behalf of hungry children.

In The City

Now, That Was An Election

by ED MURNANE

The flames hadn't even begun to die before the first wag said to me, "Hey, that's some election they're having in Rolling Meadows. It looks like someone is sure against apartments and booze."

Election years always bring out the worst in everyone, and a series of incidents such as the three major fires which have hit Rolling Meadows in the past month are certain to be linked to the election. If not in reality, then at least in the minds of those who look for something other than the routine politics of small communities.

With Monday night's fire following so closely on the heels of the political shooting incident in suburban Riverside, there was certain to be some talk about the fires as a means of either scaring some candidates away or calling attention to building deficiencies, fire code deficiencies, or a variety of other things.

As of now, there appears to be no connection between any of the three Rolling Meadows fires, and the state fire marshal indicated Tuesday that arson was quite far from his mind.

Ed Murnane

SO THIS COLUMN is not being serious in linking the fires and the election. But the fires, and the incident in Riverside, remind me of my all-time favorite local election.

It was the 1967 city election in Hickory Hills, a southwest suburban community that had a population of about 7,000 at the time.

Hickory Hills, as most people probably know, is frequently mentioned in the newspapers as one of the centers of the crime syndicate in the Chicago area.

We have friends living there, and it was during an early April visit to them in 1967 that their election caught my attention.

LIKE ROLLING MEADOWS, Hickory Hills is a city with aldermanic races rather than village-wide trustee battles.

In this small town, with its four wards, there were 56 candidates.

Forty-one of the candidates were seeking aldermanic seats, while 15 were fighting for the three city-wide positions of mayor, city clerk and treasurer.

On practically every street corner in the town, there were half a dozen billboards urging voters to elect the Good Government Party, or the Hickory Hills Party, or the Independent Party, or the Vision Party or the Non Partisan Party.

Most of the signs, and there probably were well over a hundred, were splattered with paint. Some had been knocked over and others had stickers from an opposing party pasted over the candidates' names.

WE LEARNED FROM our friends that rocks were frequently thrown through campaign headquarters' windows and party rallies had a habit of turning into subdued riots.

Surely the newspapers must be having a ball covering a campaign like this, we thought. But that was a big mistake.

There were three papers with circulation in Hickory Hills.

Two of them were aligned solely with two different parties. The third, which was said to be reporting the campaign objectively, was unavailable.

One of the papers had a banner headline on the front page reading, "Hickory Hills Rocked By Vandalism." The story revealed that the vandalism involved only tampering with campaign signs of the incumbent party, which this paper supported.

The entire front page was devoted to this party, with pictures of destroyed and paint-covered signs and a letter to the editor telling why a woman wanted the incumbent mayor re-elected.

Not once in the entire paper was there any mention of what the other four parties were doing.

Whether the mayor was re-elected or not has slipped my memory, but that campaign is certainly going to stay pretty firmly entrenched.

Prairie Cause Needs Your Donation

Citizens do not often get an easy chance to lend concrete support to a cause in which they may believe.

But there is such a chance — a simple dollars and cents chance — for those who feel Goose Lake Prairie is worth saving.

The Illinois Department of Conservation, which has moved to preserve as a state park the 1,700 acres of the virgin prairie near Morris, needs extra money to finish the job.

A total of $600,000 is being sought in private contributions, to add to the $1,400,000 the state is spending for the land. Half of the goal of the private contributions has been reached, but that leaves a formidable $300,000 yet to be raised.

A June deadline has been set to get up the money, and insure that the prairie won't be lost after all to the industrial interests whose own designs on the property inflated the buying price.

The non-profit Open Lands Project has been asked by the conservation department to coordinate the statewide drive for citizen help, and is now openly appealing for support.

Contributions — which are tax deductible —should be sent to the Open Lands Project, 53 W. Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, 60604. Checks are to be made payable to the Goose Lake Prairie Fund.

The investment can be a small one. The stake is a big one — a piece of Illinois' heritage, and a promise of open space for tomorrow's generations. It is a good cause that awaits your help.

Gates Going Up On Rail Congestion

by TOM WELLMAN

It may be partially the result of politics

More likely, it is the inevitable result of public concern that something, finally, is being done to relieve downtown traffic congestion near the railroad tracks in Arlington Heights.

The changes began several weeks ago when Police Lt. Jack Aldrich put several of his men downtown between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. to direct traffic.

Tom Wellman

Then, last week, Trustee Frank Palmatier wrote to the Chicago and North Western Ry. and asked them to relieve congestion by extending the passenger platform between Dunton and Vail.

The railroad has agreed to do so.

Palmatier's hackles had been raised initially when he was forced to sit in traffic for 35 minutes last week, waiting for a stalled commuter train to be moved from the Arlington Heights Road crossing.

AS ALL THIS frantic change was taking place, Mrs. Jean Hanlon, an independent trustee candidate, was endorsing a transportation center — for which Village Pres. John Woods has been seeking federal funds.

In the meantime, those busy little gremlins with slide rules at De Leuw Cather traffic consultants are plotting out the final map for a one-way downtown traffic plan.

All of these changes make good sense. It is surprising however, that they didn't make good sense sooner.

In fact, several trustees have cursed under their breath for several years about the lack of action. Finally, they have some progress.

The trustees realize, of course, that there is an easy solution to part of the problem — elevate or depress the tracks.

THIS WOULD REMOVE traffic-clogging commuter trains from street level. However, the cost would be almost prohibitive, and these steps would not relieve Saturday morning traffic congestion.

Considering the opposition that has arisen in the past to downtown change, it is surprising that any of the solutions have been adopted at all.

Consider the institutions involved, such as the railroad.

The railroad is anxious to add as few stops or underpasses as possible to its right-of-way.

So, the railroad has not been receptive to schemes for locating another station between Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

SUCH A STATION would cut traffic jams in downtown Arlington Heights, but the railroad won't buy the idea.

However, it did agree last week to install the longer platforms.

The Chamber of Commerce has been another fly in the ointment. It, naturally, wants to keep downtown merchants where they are presently located — downtown. To stay there, the merchants must believe in their locations.

When the one-way traffic pattern came up for approval several months ago, the trustees had to yank and tug to gain a Chamber endorsement. Chamber representatives argued that the one-way pattern might speed raffic too quickly past their show windows.

However, these institutions have stirred, and now there is progress to report.

It's still too early for wild-eyed optimism, however. There's too much more that will have to be done before it is easy and convenient to travel around in the central business district.

Did Nixon Know He Was Buying a House?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Backstairs at the White House:

Recent speculation that President Nixon might buy a 64-room castle on the Southern California coast for something over $400,000 stirred some memories in Washington.

This sort of thing has happened before to chief executives who were quite surprised to learn they were about to purchase expensive real estate—and about which they knew almost nothing.

It happened to John F. Kennedy when he was President. The story was that a group of his friends were forming a syndicate to purchase a summer White House for him at Newport, R.I., and make a gift of the house and property to the federal government.

Kennedy tried to squelch the rumors as soon as they broke into print, but the report continued to pop up from time to time until Kennedy's death. About all he was ever able to establish about the plan was that someone wanted to sell a house.

It would be surprising if Nixon planned to purchase additional real estate anywhere. He currently is paying for two relatively expensive pieces of property at Key Biscayne, Fla. While he is a well-to-do man, friends say he is not the sort to lay out $400,000 for anything at this point of his career.

Nor does it seem likely that he would want to ask Congress to put up federal funds for a branch White House in California.

What he would like is the use of a house on the lower California coast for several weekends a year and this he can have easily—for free or on a rental basis. Presidents have made such arrangements in the past without causing public outcry.

Members of the Eldorado Country Club at Palm Desert, Calif., near Palm Springs, were more than happy to provide a house for President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Furthermore, they continued the arrangement after he left office.

Members of the Augusta Ga., National Golf Club also provided a house for Eisenhower and his family several weeks each year. When he went quail shooting in south Georgia, he took over the estate of his Treasury secretary, George Humphrey.

Kennedy paid a fairly large rental for Glen Ora, his first place at Middleburg, Va., before deciding to build his own house at Atoka, just outside of Middleburg. At Palm Beach, Fla., however, Kennedy used a borrowed beachfront estate. And for one brief summer stay, he borrowed the Maine island home of Gene Tunney, the former heavyweight champion.

While he was in office, President Lyndon B. Johnson spoke privatly several times of wanting to have a winter place at Palm Springs, Calif., but he never did much about it. He made a number of tentative plans for holidays at one resort or another, but invariably ended up at his Texas ranch instead.

Instead of investing big money in a California house, Nixon can be expected to do what other presidents have done —borrow, rent or make more use of the government-owned presidential retreat, Camp David, Md.

Walkin' the Side Lines

by PAUL LOGAN

HUNDREDS SIT where thousands should be

That's been the problem at many of the football stadiums in the Mid-Suburban League because most of the games have been played on Saturday afternoons.

The reason — too few lighted fields.

"I've never seen our stadium filled," said Paul Jordan, head football coach at Forest View. "Even the year (1967) that we finished tied with Arlington for the title, the showdown game didn't fill it more than halfway."

However, this situation should change this fall as Forest View and Hersey have gotten the okay from District 214 to have lights.

Since Forest View's campaign has already started, a description of just how the program came about might be helpful to those MSL schools who have yet to get lights.

"We've been thinking about lights ever since the school was built," said Bill Beckman, Falcon athletic director.

But, up until 1968, only Arlington — which installed lights 20 years earlier — had night football. Then Prospect and Wheeling launched successful drives and added lights last fall.

Bill Beckman

"I really think that whatever credit there is for opening the floodgates for lights should go to Wheeling and Prospect," Beckman said.

And who can argue with last year's statistics. Wheeling athletic director E. E. "Bus" Ormsbee had this to say:

"Before the lights we averaged between 1,000-1,500 people a game. We're now getting around 3,000 or better."

At Prospect the gate receipts more than doubled, according to athletic director George Gattas. Over the three previous years the Knight tills took in an average of $2,900 for mostly four-game stands. Last season -- over a five game period — they totaled $8,100!

Such acceptance helped get the Falcon drive — entitled "Forest View Hi-Lites, Inc." — on its way.

After planning that started way back in October, according to Beckman, the crusade was kicked off with a big pep rally a week ago today in the Falcon gym.

Two things boosted the enthusiasm at the rally — Clay Meyer, president of the Mount Prospect Lions Club, gave the drive a boost with a check for $500, and the students were told about the prizes awaiting the top sellers of raffle tickets for a 1969 Mercury Cougar.

Making up the 12 prizes are colored, black and white and automobile television sets, stereos and radios.

The tantalizing gifts and the generous Lions' check must have been impressive for, as of last Monday, about $7,000 was in the bank — $4,000 from the students and $3,000 from the boosters.

"I think the one fellow who really stimulated this thing was Joe Russo, our financial chairman," said Beckman. "He went out and raised most of the money ($2,500) the boosters have."

The combined efforts of these two groups must raise approximately the same amount as Prospect did, according to Roy Jelinek of the booster construction committee. The cost of the Knights' lights was around $26,000.

This is how the lighting program was set up between the school and the board:

1) The corporation pays for the installation of the lights.

2) the school board pays for the electricity.

3) the board also agrees to contribute up to $7,500 or one-fourth the remaining cost of installation, and to contribute in terms of a leasing arrangement $3,200 a year for five years.

4) the booster club agrees to contribute some $1,000 a year to the athletic program, and in five years, or sooner, the high school will own the lights.

There are some difference in the lighting systems to be installed at Forest View and those now at Wheeling and Prospect. Two of the more prominent ones are the positions of the poles and the type of light bulb.

"We're going to have the light poles behind the stands," Jelinek pointed out. "We're basically doing that to have sufficient light for night track."

Beckman explained the type of bulb to be used:

"Wheeling and Prospect both have quartz lights but our transformer is not big enough to handle this type of lighting. But it can handle multivapor lights — the latest development in lighting which is most economical because it uses fewer kilowatts.

"This is the same type of lighting that will be used in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium and in the new Cincinnati stadium."

The Falcon program should give weight to some of the rows of seats in the stadium for the very first time this fall. But besides bringing out greater crowds, the three athletic directors and Coach Jordan had these interesting sidelights to add about night football:

Beckman: "One thing that is often overlooked in Friday night football is that it gives the varsity and jayvees an extra day to recuperate. I think this is very important."

Gattas: "I just feel we have more community spectators now, more adults who have never seen a high school game are able to for the first time."

Ormsbee: "It also means that in the early season the kids aren't going to be playing during the tremendous afternoon heat. And it gives the kids a chance to hold weekend jobs."

Jordan: "The atmosphere at night makes the boys more excited about playing. It also helps pull the community together."

Beckman concluded by saying this:

"I think that its a progressive step on the part of the school board to be receptive to programs like this. As far as the economics is concerned, the board will benefit in the long run."

Hersey, according to athletic director Dick Kinneman, will be inaugurating its light drive a week from today. And Bob Tipsword, Elk Grove's athletic director, indicated that the boosters were presently preparing to go before the board, and added, "We hope to have them (lights) by this fall."

If these two schools, along with Forest View, are successful, all District 214 schools will have night ball. But what about the four other members of the MSL?

The outlook looks pretty dim in the District 211 setup of Palatine, Conant and Fremd, according to Earl Stutzman, district athletic co-ordinator.

"We have had some booster clubs who were going to do it, but so far they haven't progressed very far. I can see where they might say, 'Gee whiz, if they can do it we can too.' At least I hope so."

And at Glenbard North things look dark indeed. Athletic Director Neal Hudson tells why:

"I'm sure we will not have lights and I can't foresee us ever having lights because District 87 is opposed to it. The thinking is this — there's always been Saturday afternoon football and it is going to stay that way."

The thoughts of some of these men indicate that it isn't an impossible task to get a field lighted. But it does take a strong booster club and a vigorous student body.

Such a solid combination could work wonders . . even miracles.

Coaches Form Association

Getting to Know You...

by CHUCK WILLOUR

One of the great wonders of modern life is that two people can work together in the same office all day, do basically the same kind of work, have similar interests, and still not know each other by any other name than, "That fella over there in the blue shirt."

It's a sad but true characteristic of most businesses and offices, and it's something that has bothered personnel directors for years, always defying solution.

But — hopefully — it's a problem that will no longer afflict the coaching staffs of High School District 214 schools. This year the coaches of the six district schools have formed a Coaches Association, with the hope in mind of improving communications from school to school and coordinating the athletic programs of the six schools.

The association came about through the efforts of District 214 Athletic Coordinator Howard Lester, who has been pushing for this kind of an organization now for the past few years. Last fall Lester got the program off the ground with a banquet that brought the coaches together for the first time.

After the banquet Lester got a group of the coaches to head up the organization of the new association, and by now the association's first officers have been elected: Guy Vena of Arlington is president, Don Arseneau of Prospect is vice-president, rich Chew of Prospect is secretary, and Mike Nissen — also of Prospect — is treasurer.

The association, known formally as "The Coaches Association of Illinois High School District 214," has been busy the last few months formulating a constitution, and has now set for itself four objectives:

—To engage in cooperative undertakings for the promotion of athletic education and athletics in the district;

—To promote the exchange of ideas and information among all members of the Association to foster improvement in all phases of coaching and other athletic training.

—To promote compatibility and sportsmanship among the student athletes in the district;

—And to cooperate with all organizations interested in the improvement and advancement of athletic education in the district.

Boiled down, these four objectives are simply aiming for a better athletic program for the entire district, a program that will take advantage of all that District 214 has to offer its students.

In developing the idea for a coaches association, Lester had those same objectives in the back of his mind. "As we got larger and larger, with more people coming into the district all the time," he remembers, "we became more and more detached from each other. You'd meet a fellow only once in a blue moon at some football field.

"I happen to think," Lester continues, "that it's very important to bring these coaches together, both professionally and socially. Professionally, so they can exchange ideas; socially so that they'll get to know each other — this will create a closer relationship among the coaches, bring about understanding and respect.

"This communication — both kinds — is necessary for improvement as a coach. Professionally he'll pick up new ideas, new concepts. Socially, it will humanize him, make him a better person — something he has to be to handle high school boys.

"Eventually," Lester concludes, "we have ambitions that this association will serve as a sounding board in the district for all forms of improvement in the athletic program — we'll be able to run clinics, have some well-known names come in to give our coaches advice."

And this is something that has already become a reality. The next meeting for the District 214 coaches is April 24, with Bob Nicollette as the guest speaker.

In case you don't know who Nicollette is, he's the University of Illinois trainer who has been one of the country's pioneers in the use of ice therapy for sprains and injuries rather than heat.

"He was one of the prime reasons that Proviso East won the state basketball tournament," says Prospect basketball coach and association vice-president, Don Arseneau. "Nicollette used his ice therapy on Jim Brewer and kept him in the tourney."

With that kind of start, and with a golf outing planned for later in the year for all district coaches, it looks like at least one of the great wonders of modern life is coming to an end — at least in District 214.

THE BEST IN Sports

Outdoor Sports Show Is Planned

Plans are well under way for the 11th Annual Greater Des Plaines Outdoor Sports and Vacation Show. The largest sports show in the Chicago Suburban area is co-sponsored by the Des Plaines Park District and the Des Plaines Chapter of the Izaak Walton League.

The show dates have been set for May 3rd and 4th, from 12 noon until 10 p.m. at Rand Park, 2025 Miner Street, Des Plaines.

According to Bob Kunkel and John Case, Co-Chairmen, highlights of the show are the dealers' displays of every type of camping equipment imaginable, Tackle Row featuring exhibits and demonstrations of name-brand equipment, and the Outdoor Stage show at poolside.

Other points of interest will be the Trout Fishing Pond, fast-draw pistol shooting demonstrations, archery demonstrations, and dog training exhibitions.

Admission to the show is free of charge, and the first 500 youngsters to enter the show each day will take part in the balloon flying contest. There are also golf pitching and putting contests for green and tee enthusiasts, and an exhibition tennis tournament for the tennis court buffs.

Snowed Out of Opener

Fremd Shy of Vets, Not Enthusiasm

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

Even though snow was quickly piling up on the Fremd High School baseball field Viking diamond coach Terry Gellinger had baseball on his mind Tuesday.

Wednesday afternoon Gellinger's squad was scheduled to play Ridgewood but the snow postponed the game. But the snow did not dampen Gellinger's enthusiasm to get the season started.

"Baseball is a great game," he said. "Baseball is one game in which any team can beat any other team.

"TAKE BASKETBALL for instance. If you have the shooters and the rebounders, generally you are going to win. Oh, once in a while there is going to be an upset but still you have teams with 30-1 records. There aren't very many 30-1 records in baseball."

VIKING HURLER. Righthander Tommy Bruns will be counted on by Fremd baseball coach Terry Gellinger to be the ace of the Viking staff. Bruns threw 22 innings last year and won one game and lost one. He displayed excellent control walking only three batters in the 22 innings of work.

Gellinger does not feel that his team will be 30-1 this season. First of all the Vikings do not play 31 games but mostly because his team is inexperienced.

Gellinger has All-Conference catcher Gerry Grybash back and a pair of lettermen in first baseman Larry Anderson and centerfielder Don Dixon but basically the rest of the players have seen little or no varsity action.

GRYBASH HIT a fine .300 last season while Dixon hit .333 in 12 batting appearances and Anderson hit .111. Anderson's average should rise this year and Gellinger is hoping that Grybash and Dixon can hit at the same pace as last year.

Rounding out the Viking starting infield will be Ken Stinson at second base, Pete Clark at shortstop and Ed Wlodarczyk at third base.

Flanking Dixon in the outfield will be Rick Dwyer in left field and Bill Schult in right field.

For pitchers Gellinger is looking at Tom Bruns, Schult, Tim Simpson and Anderson. Bruns and Simpson are the only experienced hurlers and are righthanders. Schult and Anderson are southpaws.

Mike Kolze will be the catcher behind Grybash and Steve Kuh and Mike Norman will be the extra outfielders. Bob Loughlin is the utility infielder.

GELLINGER rates Palatine, Arlington and Wheeling as the Mid-Suburban League's pre-season favorites. But he is quick to add: "Don't bet on it. Never bet on high school baseball."

Gellinger explained further. "Through a 162-game season you can get a measure as to whom is the best team and the best team will usually win it," he said.

"But in high school baseball where you only play 14 league games anything can happen. You can pick up a couple of wins on breaks; you might not face the opposition's best pitcher; or the opposition's best pitcher might have a bad day when he faces you. In that way you can pick up a few wins and with a 14-game schedule a few wins can put you on the top.

"I'M RATING Palatine, Arlington and Wheeling as the strongest because of the pitching I know they have back. Elk Grove is the defending champion and they might be tough again this year. But I'm putting no money on who is going to win it."

Gellinger also said that a team which has a poor regular season record still might do well in the post-season tournament. "Last year," he said, "Niles finished in seventh or eighth place in the Suburban League. But in the tournament they had a few breaks and went all the way to the state semi-finals."

Gellinger does not rate his ball club as a pre-season favorite in the Mid-Suburban League. He feels that perhaps his team may not have the experience to win the championship. But, assuredly, he is not betting against it.

Miss McLean is attending Wisconsin State University at Whitewater and will graduate in May. She is a business education major and a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. Her fiance, an accounting major at Madison Business College, will also graduate in May.

Andrea Lee Mack

Miss Andrea Lee Mack's engagement to Rafael S. Windham of Titusville, Fla., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mack of Palatine.

A graduate of Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Miss Mack is an elementary school teacher in Rockledge, Fla. She formerly taught in Okinawa. Her fiance, an engineering aide for the Boeing Company at Cape Kennedy, served as a Lieutenant in the Air Force and is a graduate of Auburn University in Alabama. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Windham of Elba, Ala.

The wedding is set for May 30 in Titusville.

Barbara Lyn Lucas

A summer wedding is planned by Barbara Lyn Lucas of Danville and Lucky Landt Somers of Arlington Heights, according to an announcement by her parents, the Lloyd R. Lucases.

Mr. Somers is son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucky W. Somers, 608 S. Burton Place, Arlington Heights. Lucky is a 1964 graduate of Arlington High School and received his bachelor's degree from the University of Illinois, where he was affiliated with Delta Tau Delta Fraternity. He is currently stationed at Pensacola, Fla., in Aviation Naval Officers Candidate School.

Barbara, a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, will be graduated from the University of Illinois in June.

Wife Takes a Bath

by MARTHA SHERWOOD

I don't bathe I shower. Oh, I pamper myself with a quick swipe with an oily scented paper to grind off the 'tarter" at heels, knees and elbows, but I seldom have the time for a good soak.

My husband on rare occasions luxuriates in a hot tub with a glass of warming port wine close at hand. My daughter splashes amid red whales and orange swans while I wet, soap, rinse and out!

When I do bathe it is a time of peace and quiet and an opportunity to catch up on a backlog of periodicals or borrowed best sellers.

Ignoring the inflated grin on the box, I pour a handful of Mr Bubble into a churning tub When the suds are knee high I sink into a comforting foam. Then, the fun begins

THE MUCH READ paperback borrowed from a friend opens to a juicy passage and the climaxing page is lost in the froth. The overdue library book shrugs its plastic jacket and sinks like a non-Ivory bar of soap The magazine pages stick together as I damply try to leaf through them.

Defeated by steamed up glasses as well, I lay magazine and specs beside the tub and sink back, sighing. The silence is broken by the cliff of suds at either ear noisily popping like a three-toned breakfast cereal.

Over top the white peaks, I proudly view our newly tiled wall. It's so nice not to be looking at bare pipes.

But, it is impossible for anyone to rest properly in a bathtub. On either sits like a bookend with cold shoulders and no place to rest the head or sinks to chin level and crosses feet and legs like palm fronds over the water faucet.

GIDDY WITH THE heat, one may entertain oneself without reading. A leg raised through bubble bath is graced with a white "mod" hip boot while strategic suds build up a super-star bust line of feathery nothingness

Not believing the box which says I can just bubble clean, I suds up a wash cloth. Almost instantly the bubbles explode en masse and I'm left sitting in four inches of tepid water. Betrayed, I once again see those housewife knees and a post-holiday (name one!) roll of excess flesh.

Blindly I get out of the tub, place one foot on Time magazine's face-of-the-hour and hear the crisp crack of eye glass frames. As I stagger from the bathroom a masculine voice speaks:

"OH, HONEY, I wanted to tell you not to take a bath, the mortar's not dry."

Lending tempo to his belated words, the pebbly sound of tiny tiles falling into a now empty tub echoes in my ears.

So, it will be an artistic tomorrow as I sit in a dry tub re-creating in ceramics.

Tight or Loose Wrap

Some meats keep best when tightly wrapped for storage These include ham, bacon, sausage (smoked or unsmoked) and frankfurters Plan to save the wrapping in which they come so it can be reused around the unused portion of these meats.

Prepackaged, fresh meats can be stored in their original wrappings for one to two days For best flavor plan to use ground or variety meats within a day or two after purchasing. Steaks, chops, roasts or other cuts to be stored three to four days should be rewrapped loosely Partial drying on surface increases keeping quality.

Better Nix Pantsuit

Can't make up your mind about tagging along with the trend to pantsuits? If you listen to Chuck Howard, you'll nix the idea. The designer says: "I like pants on men . . . or just maybe in a country club"

Palatine Antique Show Is a 'First'

History will be made in Palatine April 11 and 12.

On those two days, Friday and Saturday, members of the Junior Woman's Club of Palatine will present the first antique show and sale in the history of the village, and the first annual show presented by the Juniors.

Mrs. Clark Sanford, ways and means chairman, has announced this Palatine "first" will be held at the Plum Grove Club which is located just off the 53 west frontage road between 62 and Kirchoff Road.

Doors will open at 11 a.m. Friday, April 11; closing time that evening will be 10 p.m. Saturday hours will be from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Tickets will be sold at the door.

For the convenience of the public, the Juniors have also announced that luncheon and supper will be served at the club.

Proceeds from the antique show will be donated to William Rainey Harper College Scholarship Funds.

Juvenile Crime Talk For St. Viator Moms

Prevention of juvenile crime will be discussed by a member of the juvenile division of Arlington Heights Police Department at Thursday's meeting of the St. Viator Mothers' Club.

The meeting in the school auditorium will begin at 8:30 p.m. Members are asked to bring their husbands to this meeting. Junior room mothers will be hostesses for the evening.

We Saw You at the Ball

PANT SUITS were in the fashion limelight Saturday night when the Board of Directors of Clearbrook School presented its annual dinner dance. Mr. and Mrs. Roger L. Carlson of Arlington Heights and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nikoden Jr. of Inverness were guests at the fund-raiser.

'The Legal Aspects of Nursing'

"Legal Aspects of Nursing" will be the subject under discussion when the Arlington Heights Nurses Club meets tonight (Thursday) at 8 in the cafeteria conference room at Northwest Community Hospital. Robert Harrington, an attorney with the firm of Harrington and Day, Chicago, will be speaker. Any registered nurse living or working in Arlington Heights is invited to attend or to call Mrs. Richard Ackerman, 259-0796 for information.

Hostess for the evening will be Mrs. Lee Bourgeois, assisted by Mrs. Richard Degener, Mrs. John Langhenry, Mrs. Albert DiGiulio, Mrs. Donald Kettering, Mrs. John Detweiler and Mrs. Harold Klingner.

Mrs. Howard Johnson has been named acting Lending Closet Chairman to replace Mrs. David Exline, who is moving to Barrington. Anyone needing sickroom equipment may call Mrs. Johnson at 392-5373 or Mrs. Thomas Thomas at 394-0222. Crutches may be obtained from Mrs. Robert Karlicek, 392-7214; vaporizers from Mrs. Richard Fremgen, 392-7996.

According to Mrs. Exline, many items have been recently added to the club Lending Closet, including a wheelchair purchased with the Helen Kopplin Memorial Fund. Also available are baby scales, colostomy irrigating equipment, hospital beds and trapezes, sheepskin for the prevention and treatment of decubiti (bedsores), bedside commodes and walkers. These and many other items are available without charge to any resident of Arlington for as long as six months.

CLEARBROOK BOARD MEMBERS W. Richard Impey found willing "customers" in Mrs. Impey, Mrs. Frederick M. Tyson and Mr. Tyson as he took his turn at selling beverage tickets during Clearbrook benefit dinner dance Saturday night at the Round Table Room of the Arlington Carousel.

Misericordia Benefit

Mrs. Donald Stribley of Arlington Heights, president of Misericordia Auxiliary, attended a recent luncheon to see a preview of fashions by Chester Weinberg that will be featured at the Misericordia annual spring benefit.

The fashion show will be held April 16 at the Conrad Hilton and will display summer ensembles designed by Mr. Weinberg.

Digestion Data

It's an old wives' tale that pork is hard to digest Meat from all animals: beef, pork, lamb and veal, reveals that 97 per cent of the protein is completely digested while meat fat is at least 96 per cent digested

Add to this a psychological value: pleasing aroma and appetite appeal from meats may aid in the digestion of other foods contained in the meal. That's because well-cooked meats help initiate the flow of digestive juices.

'Open Shoe' Summer

The opened shoe is the shoe to have, starting right now, getting the jump on summer, says the National Footwear Institute. The style, tried last year, worked well in both Europe and America.

A city sandal to consider: A criss-cross of straps. Another is a shelter-toed shoe buckled off at the sides and opened at the back. Other interpretations: an oxford or spectator with everything possible pared away until what remains is a sandal.

Hostesses for the April meeting are Mrs Forrest Sward and Mrs Charles Watkins

College Classmates Wed

Classmates at Murray State University in Kentucky were married Feb. 15 in St. Simon Episcopal Church, Arlington Heights The bride is the former Judith Elizabeth Gegg, daughter of the Lester C. Geggs of Mount Prospect, and the groom is Charles A. Loveall, son of the Edward Lovealls of Louisville.

Three of the couple's classmates served as their attendants, along with childhood friends of the groom and his brother and sister. From Murray State, Miss Wynema Gatewood was maid of honor, Mrs. Gregory Wiechmann was a bridesmaid and Paul Denison was among the ushers. The groom's sister, Martha Loveall, was the other bridesmaid. his brother, James Loveall, was best man.

Ushers, besides Mr Denison, were Greg Masterson and Joe Schlatter of Louisville.

THE BRIDE WORE a candlelight peau de soie wedding gown fashioned with a chapel train. Alencon lace formed a high scalloped neckline, and lace inserts trimmed the long sleeves. A shoulder-length veil fell from a matching alencon lace crown.

The bride carried her grandmother's childhood prayer book which was covered with lace, and attached to it was a cascade bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis and ivy.

The bridal attendants wore moss green empire gowns styled with a velvet brocade bodice and chiffon skirt with a floating panel. Their short veils were attached to velvet crowns of the moss green, and they carried yellow fuji mums with camellia foliage.

WHITE GLADS and mums decorated the altar of St. Simon church for the 11 a.m. double ring rites. The Rev. Samuel Keys performed the ceremony.

Later there was a reception and luncheon at Old Orchard Country Club to fete the bridal pair. Mrs. Gegg greeted the 65 guests in a beige and green brocade dress with brown mink trim and Mrs. Loveall wore a light brown silk dress and coat ensemble. Mrs. Gegg's corsage was of green cymbidiums, and Mrs. Loveall's of yellow cymbidiums.

The newlyweds went to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans and to Florida on their honeymoon and are making their home in Louisville, Ky.

The bride, a graduate of Prospect High School, is a nurse in a Louisville hospital, and her husband works with his father in a contracting business.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loveall

Wedding Has Valentine Theme

Because it was the day after St. Valentine's Day, red velvet gowns were worn by Pamelo Jo Benson's attendants when she became the bride of Roger William Sherman. The gowns, fashioned with empire waistlines accented with pearl beading, puffed sleeves and jewel necklines, were made by the bride's mother.

Pillbox hats with small back bows and hanging balls of carnations tipped in red and sprinkled with sweetheart roses completed their ensembles.

Pamela, daughter of the Raymond G. Bensons, 1050 E. Meadow Lane, Mount Prospect, and Roger, son of the Roger M. Shermans, 1110 N. Wheeling Road, Mount Prospect, were married Feb. 15 in a 5 o'clock double ring ceremony in St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect. Rev. David Quill officiated.

FOR HER MARRIAGE, the bride chose a gown of peau de soie and lace. The bodice and sleeves were of the lace as were the ruffles at the cuffs. Her gown also featured a high neckline, empire waist and an A-line skirt with scalloped lace hemline. Her train was full and fell from the waist with a lace applique along the bottom.

As a headpiece she wore a crown of pearls and crystals set in a veil of French illusion, and she carried a cascade of glamellias.

Maid of honor to the bride was Joyce Heimeshoff of Mount Prospect, and bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Cynthia and Marsha Benson of Mount Prospect, Roberta Kirchner, a cousin from Cary, and Pam Lynn Sherman of Macomb.

Best man was the groom's brother, Kenneth Sherman o Macomb, and groomsmen were Daniel Knowles and William Hoos of Wheeling and James Fruehling and Paul Leach of Mount Prospect.

A RECEPTION IN the main ballroom at Chevy Chase Country Club followed the ceremony. Mrs. Benson also made her own gown and matching coat of pink brocade. The coat was accented with mink trim on the sleeves and the collar Mrs. Sherman chose a blue linen gown with bodice of appliques. Her matching coat buttoned at the top with long sleeves accented with the appliques Both mothers had corsages of glamellias to match the bride's bouquet.

The couple honeymooned at Mount Airy Lodge in the Poconos Mountains, Pennsylvania, and are now making their home in Rolling Meadows. The new Mrs. Sherman is a secretary for DeSoto, Inc. and her bridegroom is employed by Walgreen Drug. Co.

Swiss Cheese Fried Is Good with Salad

From the Southern part of Switzerland comes this fried cheese dish called Cheese Piccata. Slices of Swiss cheese are dipped in a batter then cooked in margarine until golden brown on both sides. Serve with noodles and a green salad.

Cheese Piccata

2 eggs
1¼ cups sifted flour
¾ cup milk
Dash salt
1/3 cup margarine (about)
12 (4 x 4-inch) slices Swiss cheese (about)

Beat eggs well, then beat in flour, milk and salt. Melt 2 tablespoons margarine in skillet. Dip 3 or 4 slices cheese in batter, coating each well. Cook in margarine over medium heat, turning once, until golden brown on both sides. Continue until all batter is used, adding margarine to skillet as needed. Makes about 12.

Freshen Up Woolens

You do save on cleaning winter woolens by taking advantage of coin machines, but you may miss the professional finish. Sizing now helps you give woolens that professional touch at home. After cleaning, spray with sizing, then press inside out and on the right side. Woolens become crisp and shapely with a fresh, bouncy feel, and without iron shine or flaking.

SECRETARY
For Administrative Work

Here's a job, the right girl will find not only interesting and challenging, but financially rewarding. It'll take someone with the desire and intelligence to learn something about printing production-scheduling, ordering of plates, estimating, etc. But more important, the job requires some one who has the desire to "run her own show." A girl who can follow through on her own, handle her own correspondence, get promotion mailings out on time. You'll have your own office in new, air conditioned bldg., near O'Hare. If you could get excited about this kind of job and want to make it a career, call G. O. Fossler, 299-0175.

High School Supported

Pass Reform Bill

SPRINGFIELD-- A bill requiring registering voters to show social security or taxpayers' identification numbers for registration passed the Senate yesterday and now goes to the House

The bill, sponsored by John A Graham, R-Barrington, is intended to help identify persons who are challenged at the polls. The Senate vote was 31-17

Ike Still 'Critical'

WASHINGTON - Former President Dwight D Eisenhower remained in "critical" condition late yesterday with "evidences of congestive heart failure (persisting) despite the fact that all appropriate therapeutic measures are being taken "

The late report from Walter Reed Army Medical Center said, "Failure to respond is considered as an unfavorable prognostic sign "

Call U.N. Session

The U N Security Council is expected to meet this morning for the first time since last December after yesterday's Israeli bombing which Jordan claims killed 18 civilians and wounded 25.

Israel conceded its planes entered Jordan but said they attacked a commando camp not a civilian center

Charges 'Politics'

SPRINGFIELD Democratic politicians reacting to Gov Richard Ogilvie's local government message said yesterday he has "chosen political power rather than effective government as his goal "

Senate Minority Leader Thomas McGloon said the governor's special message yesterday was the "most disappointing" in memory

Debt Hike Okayed

WASHINGTON— A $12 billion increase in the national debt was approved by the Senate yesterday. It's enough to head off a mid-April fiscal crisis but is still short of the cushion requested by President Nixon

The bill boosts the "temporary" debt to $377 billion, enough to allow the government to pay its bills for another year.

Woman Gets Post

SPRINGFIELD Mrs Sharon Harker of Eureka yesterday was named superintendent of the county fair division of the Illinois Agricultural Department. She is the first woman to head a division in that department

Her division is responsible for distributing state funds to agricultural and industrial fairs throughout the state

Charges Rickover

WASHINGTON -- Vice Adm Hyman Rickover yesterday was charged with persecuting nuclear submarine officers under his command. The charge was made by Charles Gubser, R-California, at a session of the House Armed Services Committee.

He charged that the treatment is causing some officers to leave the service Rickover, who was present, did not have the opportunity to reply

Community leaders are solidly behind the April 12 referendum to authorize construction of a new Dist. 214 high school in Rolling Meadows

The sampling of city leaders polled by The Herald said that if the $8.7 million referendum passes, Rolling Meadows will receive a boost in community spirit and have broader educational and recreational opportunities available close to home.

Ald. Tom Waldron, who headed the Dist. 214 Citizens Committee that recommended location of the new school on a 40-acre site on Central Road in Rolling Meadows, says he thinks it is essential that every Rolling Meadows citizen turn out Saturday, April 12, to back the referendum.

POLLS WILL BE open that day from noon to 7 p m., with Rolling Meadows residents voting in Kimball Hill and Salk schools. Dividing line for the two precincts is Kirchoff Road.

Waldron told The Herald he is convinced the new school will open up whole new horizons for our high school students, their parents and the community."

When the new school opens, Rolling Meadows students who are now bused the five miles to Forest View daily will be able to go to school close to home Many will be able to walk to school.

Because they must go so far to school now, Waldron says, Rolling Meadows youth of high school age don't participate in after-school activities as much as they might

"MANY MORE WILL participate in the fine variety of activities the schools offer" after the Rolling Meadows high school opens, Waldron predicted.

Waldron noted that Forest View's enrollment now includes 1,000 Rolling Meadows youngsters. By 1971, the number of high school students from Rolling Meadows may climb to 2,000, school studies show.

B K McMinn, former chamber of commerce president who also served on the high school's Citizens Committee and now is a candidate for the Dist. 214 school board, says the new high school would make Rolling Meadows "a more attractive place to live" and "increase the value of homes" in Rolling Meadows.

"I am convinced it is needed," McMinn said

"I THINK THIS WILL give our city a lot of spirit," said Mrs. Gordon Black past president of the Rolling Meadows Junior Woman's Club

She predicted that the city's civic and service organizations will rally around the school once it is built, meeting there and planning projects to benefit the school and students.

"I've got three elementary school children now but we plan to remain in Rolling Meadows. I am definitely going to vote 'yes,' " Mrs. Black said.

A different benefit was cited by Harold Conley, park board president.

"It will allow our teenagers to identify with Rolling Meadows more directly than they have been able to when they went to schools out of the city," Conley said.

He predicted strong cooperation between the park district and the high school to "provide places in town for teens to occupy themselves.

"INSTEAD OF HAVING our children elsewhere — not that those areas are bad — I would like them to associate with their own community. We have not had a place adequate for this up to this point," Conley added.

Virginia Connell, Rolling Meadows librarian, cited the continuing education benefits the new high school can provide and predicted that the high school "will draw the community closer together."

"School spirit develops into community spirit which will reflect throughout the city," she added.

Tom Fogarty, city fire chief who has four daughters — one of them now at Forest View — said, "I will be glad to see my girls go to school in town. Now it's a matter of getting up at six o'clock "

Fogarty, who has lived in Rolling Meadows 14 years, noted that most of the city's first settlers now have children in high school.

"A LOT OF US participate at Forest View but it will be nice to have activities closer to home," Fogarty said.

Mayor Roland J. Meyer has urged all aldermanic candidates and their workers to campaign for the high school referendum as they go door to door politicking.

He says construction of the new high school will "pretty much complete the educational facilities of the city. We can't expect to have a college.

"I encourage all residents to vote April 12 to help assure the referendum's passage," Meyer said.

The new school planned for Rolling Meadows would be built directly across Central Road from Sacred Heart of Mary High School.

Sacred Heart officials, worried about the private school's financial problems, asked Dist. 214 about the possibility of buying their school, but the public school board decided it would be too hard to convert. The Dist. 214 board of education has, however, pledged cooperation with Sacred Heart whenever possible.

FACILITIES TO BE included in the $8.7 million high school include a large fieldhouse with competition floor and bleachers, a track and several other playing courts. The little theater will seat 500. The school design calls for construction of two cafeteria areas, both capable of being used for community meetings.

Dist. 214 has instructed its architects to make tap-ons accessible so an indoor pool can be built at the school site later.

Park district officials asked for those arrangements, saying they could not include the indoor pool in their recently passed referendum but were interested in developing the facilities later.

Not every Rolling Meadows citizen will be able to send his children to the new Dist. 214 school when it opens, as high school district boundary lines now stand, although the full community will have access to the facilities at night.

Part of Rolling Meadows lies within Palatine Dist. 211. The dividing line runs roughly along Owl Drive south of Kirchoff Road and between Robin and Flicker lanes on the north.

SEVERAL YEARS ago residents in that area petitioned for annexation to Dist. 214 of all the land lying east of Highway 53.

The court turned them down but the judge, in ruling against the request, said that the petitioners would have a better case when a new Dist. 214 high school is opened in Rolling Meadows.

Directors Rejoin Relations Council

Two directors were returned to the Rolling Meadows Human Relations Council and three new members were elected to the board at Monday night's annual meeting.

John Connor and Mimi Stafford will stay on the board for a new term. New to the board are Sister Jerome R.S.H.M., Dave Sundling and Marc Wallace.

ABOUT 30 MEMBERS of the council were in attendance to amend the by-laws to allow the board to appoint honorary members.

"These will be people who support our purpose but are too busy to serve actively on the board," explained Mrs. Rena Trevor, who chaired the meeting in the absence of the president, Elvin W. Byrom.

The council has applied for a state charter.

Meetings on the fourth Monday evening of the month are open to interested persons.

ROLLING MEADOWS CAMPFIRE Girls helped celebrate their birthday week by serving cupcakes at a PTA meeting this week. Packing the goodies are Diane Nagle, Christine Sadler and Margaret Balmas. The girls presented the cakes at Salk School PTA.

Sing-Out at Viator

Sing-Out Palatine will perform on April 18 and 20 at St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights, as part of "Up With People" week, April 13 to 20.

The performances will be from 8 to 10 p.m. and 3 to 5 p.m., respectively, with an admission charge of $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. Children are free.

The singing group will help bring to the Northwest suburbs the ideals of "Up With People" through "positive oriented songs."

Sing-Out Palatine was organized in March, 1967, and has grown in membership from 10 to more than 80. In February, a board of officials was elected and a constitution was written.

DURING THE past few months, the group has performed at Niles College, at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, and the American Legion in Arlington Heights.

Since their organization, members of the group have performed the World Sing-Out Festival in New Rochelle, N. Y., at the Conrad Hilton Hotel and Sherman House, and Antoine's Restaurant, in Chicago, and many churches, school groups, chambers of commerce and other functions in the area.

The local group, the first Up With People singing group in the state, is part of a 50,000-member national organization, whose members have performed around the nation, toured Italy and the Congo, and performed on television and made recordings.

Those wishing additional information are asked to call or write Sing-Out Palatine, Post Office Box 422, or call 358-2985.

Building Gets Council's OK

A high school building in Rolling Meadows has the endorsement of the city council.

Aldermen this week passed an official resolution endorsing the effort of High School Dist. 214 to build its seventh school on the Central Road site and to maintain the present high quality of education.

The action supports a favorable vote on the three-part referendum which will be held in the district April 12, along with the election of three members to the board of education.

ALD. TOM WALDRON, who chaired the 140-member citizens lay committee which recommended the selection of the Rolling Meadows site, introduced the resolution, which also carried the endorsement of the candidacy of Billie K. McMinn of Rolling Meadows for election to the board.

Rolling Meadows has had no representation on the high school board for about 10 years, said Waldron.

McMinn, a local accountant, is a former president of the chamber of commerce and headed one of the sub-committees of the Dist. 214 study group.

Debate Aldermanic Pay

An ordinance doubling aldermanic salaries, starting in 1971, has reached the first reading stage of Rolling Meadows City Council procedures.

It must be passed before the April 15 election if the victors are to reap benefits during their term of office.

City officials cannot vote themselves a pay raise while in office.

That's why the 1971 effective date was set, so all aldermen would be on the same pay scale.

At the time the pay was raised to the present $25 per meeting, only half the aldermen, those newly elected, were eligible.

That was six years ago, and of the present council aldermen Stephen Eberhard, Tom Waldron and James Watson were paid at the old rate of $15 for the next two years, until they were re-elected.

THE COUNCILMEN may not debate long on raising the pay to $50 a meeting when the bill comes up for passage April 8.

They may agree with Nicholas Schmitt, 2303 School St., a former alderman who commented this week that aldermen are "grossly underpaid."

He spoke from experience of the many committee meetings and other demands on an alderman's time, as well as telephone calls at home and office, in addition to the regular council meetings.

But an aldermanic candidate argued against the pay raise.

Fredrick Jacobson, now president of the board of health, would take the additional $6,000 a year, add the $1,200 now being paid a part time sanitarian and "find approximately $2,500 more in the budget" to pay the salary of a full time sanitarian.

"Everybody seems to favor a full-time sanitarian," said Jacobson, "but every time we (the board of health) get put off with the plea that there are no funds. Nobody will ever take a public stand on it. The time is now."

Scratching NMAD Is Out

Disconnection of Palatine from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD) is not considered the solution to the village's mosquito problems.

That's the conclusion of a special village committee appointed to investigate the reason behind swarms of the pesty insects plaguing the village last summer.

In its 18-page report, the group said it would not be advisable to disconnect or dissolve the district.

"A great deal more interest and support would be necessary to accomplish this action properly," it was explained.

BUT BASED on the conclusion that taxes have been paid toward a "mosquito abatement program that has become ineffective and is operated as a temporary control program," the committee said a legal tax protest would be in order.

The committee further recommends that fogging (a temporary control measure) of the adult mosquito be done only upon request of village officials.

Study by Palatine's committee, which is headed by Mrs. Clayton Brown, has included attendance at six of the past eight monthly meetings of NMAD and three meetings with Judge Harry Comerford, who is responsible for appointing trustees to the district.

IN ADDITION, the group has done research into recognized effective control methods of mosquitoes. The members also requested financial and activity reports from NMAD.

The report emphasized Palatine's committee made 11 official requests for a treasurer's report before it was received.

So the group also is recommending an investigation by the Better Government Association with regard to finance reports.

Other recommendations to Palatine's village board include:

—Legislation to amend the Mosquito Abatement Act regarding the manner by which appointments are made to the board.

—A request from the village and township government to NMAD for minutes of monthly meetings.

—Appointment by the village of an "observer" to attend meetings of NMAD and request the League of Women Voters also to appoint an "observer."

—The village and township government should request exact information as to the agency responsible for mosquito abatement operations of creeks, streams, rivers, natural lakes and reservoirs.

—The report made by the Palatine committee be made available to all municipalities in NMAD.

A BASIC conclusion of the committee is that there is no control over actions of the mosquito district

"Until there is some legislation to correct the method by which trustees are selected to serve on this board, we have a form of taxation without representation," the committee reported.

Palatine's village board decided to schedule a committee-of-the-whole session in order to thoroughly review the lengthy report and discuss future official action.

Trustee Wendell Jones said, "The committee is to be commended for such a thorough analysis of the problem."

Other members of the mosquito committee include Richard Dawson, Palatine director of environmental health; Mrs. Martha Loss, Dist. 15 director of health services; and Earl Dailey, a research chemist for Charles Bruning Co. Township Supervisor Howard Olsen also participated in the group's study.

Bakers Help Make Life Richer

ALMOST LIKE homemade, the fresh and warm baked goods from local bakeries in the area draw scores of customers everyday who smell the sweet fragrances early in the morning from ovens that have been going since 2 a.m.

by MARTHA KOPER

It takes more than sugar and flour to bake that warm fresh sweet roll you eat in the morning on the way to the train or at the office.

It takes someone getting up in the middle of the night, mixing, molding, and baking in order to have a wide selection of high-calorie breakfasts awaiting the morning crowd that jams our local bakeries as early as 6 a.m.

Shops where fresh baked goods always can be found in the suburban area are not crying for business.

There's something magic about walking into a local bakery and knowing because of the sweet fragrance that the sweet rolls just came out of the oven. Local bakers know this too.

That's why they're in business and why they have become accustomed to working while their customers sleep.

AT THE PALATINE Pastry Shop, Joseph Seidl arrives at his store on Slade Street every morning about 2 a.m. He doesn't leave until three in the afternoon.

"It's nice to be going out at night when everybody else is asleep," he joked.

"After all, that's a baker's life."

And Seidl, who has made his living in a bakery for the past 32 years, certainly knows what a baker's life is like.

Bakers from other local stores closely follow Seidl's routine. Whether they begin work at midnight or 3 a.m. they end up working almost as many hours.

For an obvious reason, bakery owners make sure all their food is fresh in the morning. That's when the sweet fragrance is irresistible.

The majority of Seidl's customers from 6 to 9 a.m. are commuters rushing to the train, but with always enough time to stop at his little shop for a roll or doughnut.

"THAT'S WHY WE have to start baking at 2 a.m.," he said.

A baker's life means many long and unusual hours, but it also means enjoying the work.

"We have to like it, don't we?" asked a baker who specializes in decorating cakes.

There are all types of skills involved in a baker's job. Some of them come easier with years of experience.

Take Charles Danegger of Arlington Heights, who owns the Danegger Pastry Shop located in Arlington Market. He's been in the business for more than 35 years and can decorate a big wedding cake in less than a half hour.

His shop is a true family operation with his wife and son working many hours a day too. In fact, it's a third generation business since Danegger's father began in the bakery business before the turn of the century.

MRS. DANEGGER admits she never dreamed of becoming so closely associated with bakeries, but has no regrets.

"It's interesting work and we meet so many different people," she said.

It's a good feeling to step into a store and have the person behind the counter know what you want.

Indeed most customers know what they want too, because they frequently come just for the "specialty of the house."

At the Palatine Pastry Shop, customers are offered a choice of several German baked goods. As a matter of fact, Seidl started in the trade as a boy living in Germany.

When he came to the United States in the mid-1950's he quickly learned there is a difference between European and American baking.

"AMERICANS WANT everything a little richer," he smiled, "and everything has .o look nice."

In Europe, the customers don't care too much about how the food looks, as long as it tastes good," he explained.

"When we bake American, we use more butter," Seidl smiled.

But maybe it's the frequent visits to local bakeries and not the butter that makes Americans look like the best-fed population of the world.

MAKING CERTAIN that everyone joins in the celebration of their birthday, Palatine Camp Fire Girls, Georgianna O'Toole (left) and Debbie Lynn Doss, share their mini-birthday cakes with the village fire department and Fire Chief Orville Helms.

Swimming, Camping Tops

(This is the third article in a series on the new Countryside YMCA's progress in its first year.)

YMCAs probably are more closely associated with swimming and camping than any other recreational activity, and the new Countryside YMCA is no exception.

Even though it's only a year old and has no facilities of its own yet, the Countryside YMCA offers a complete swimming program at several "borrowed" pools and a more-that-complete camping program is planned for this summer.

According to Mrs. Roberta Turcotte, program director and chairman of the swimming program, the YMCA is offering swimming programs for children who have never been swimming, for teens and advanced children swimmers and for adults

SWIMMING FACILITIES at St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights and at Elgin Academy in Elgin are being used by the YMCA

Attesting to the success of the swim program were the results of swim team competition among Chicago area YMCAs. Countryside won several trophies, despite the fact that it doesn't have its own facilities and is less than a year old.

Adult programs are not as vigorous as the swim team activity, but women in the swim class know they've had a work out after class and men who participate in the Y Indian Guides swim program have a tough time keeping up with their sons.

But as extensive as the swimming program at the new YMCA, this summer's camping program lights up more eyes on the YMCA staff.

Four types of camping will be offered to youngsters in the Countryside area.

THE FIRST, a day camp, will be for children who have completed first grade. It will be held at Camp Duncan near Volo, Ill., and will offer many activities not offered at most day camps, including boating and swimming.

A special eight-day resident camp for boys and girls who have never camped before will be held between June 20 and 28.

A limit of 75 boys and 75 girls between 8 and 12 years will be allowed to attend.

The third program is the regular camp session and Countryside youngsters may attend one of several YMCA camps in the Chicago area.

THE FOURTH PROGRAM is the one that draws the most interest among the YMCA staff. An interracial camp, for 50 white boys, 50 black boys and 50 Spanish-speaking boys aged 8 to 13 will be held at Camp Duncan. Three sessions are scheduled, beginning June 30.

Complete information about the swimming and camping programs may be obtained by calling the YMCA office at 359-2400.

Almost a Repeat? Corra's Close

Rolling Meadows Fire Chief Tom Fogerty was called to Corra Plumbing, 5110 Tollview Tuesday night following a report that a salamander (heater) was going full blast.

Fogerty called the unit -- similar to the one believed to have started the King's Walk apartment fire in Rolling Meadows Monday night -- a fire hazard and ordered it turned off.

Corra is building a warehouse and offices at the site. A mason laying bricks this afternoon turned on the outdoor heater because he didn't want the mortar to freeze.

Fogerty said high winds made the heater an increased danger.

Camps At Eagle Cave

Boy Scout Troop 209 of Palatine camped at Eagle Cave, Wis., last weekend, enjoying cooking, cave exploring and hiking in the surrounding natural park.

The 26 boys were accompanied by nine adult leaders. Supervising the scouts was Bill Pankey. The cave and natural park will be the site of a Midwest Scout Jamboree in August.

Boards at Full Strength

Palatine's government advisory bodies have been brought to full strength with announcement of two appoints by Village Pres. John Moodie.

He recommended James Bennett, public works director, for appointment to the plan commission and Thomas LaDore as the seventh member of the zoning board of appeals.

With approval from the board of trustees, the appointments bring both groups to full membership for the first time in almost a year.

Serving as the village's public works director for the past four years, Bennett brings much construction knowledge to the plan commission. Before coming to Palatine in 1965, he was director of Wheeling's public works and building departments.

PRIOR TO becoming a municipal employe, he owned a construction company. He is a graduate of Washburn Trade School in Chicago and has taken courses in municipal public works administration.

A resident of Palatine since 1964, LaDore is a member of the Kemmerly Real Estate staff. Before joining the real estate business, he was in the sales division of S. A. Hirsh Manufacturing Co. of Skokie.

LaDore and his wife Geneva have six children and live at 532 Burno Drive in the Pleasant Hill area.

MALFUNCTION of this butane-fed temporay space heater may have started the King's Walk apartment fire, says Harry Schaeffer, deputy state fire marshal, who has asked the manufacturer to run tests on the salamanders.

Committee OKs Solicitor Bills

Legislation that would permit municipalities to control door-to-door solicitors was reported out of the municipalities committee of the Illinois House of Representatives yesterday with the recommendation that it be passed.

Two bills, HB 107 and 108, were introduced in the current session of the legislature by Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, granting local government the power to license and regulate direct sellers, a power heretofore denied municipalities by the state government.

THE SCHLICKMAN bills would permit direct sellers to either "register with the Department of Registration and Education or be subject to any municipal licensing or regulation."

The department is authorized to revoke or suspend solicitor permits based on certain guidelines, the same guidelines set down for municipalities.

Supporting the legislation in testimony before the municipalities committee were Steve Sargent, executive director of the Illinois Municipal League, Robert Van Deusen and Wayne Anderson, managers of Glenview and Evanston, Harold Ross of Field Enterprises and Ernest Wittle, plant manager for the Avon Co.

In other action yesterday, Gov. Richard Ogilvie delivered a nine-point special message on local government, each point of which will be provided with enabling legislation.

The fifth point of the message, of particular interest to the suburban Northwest, would enable municipalities to annex immediately contiguous territory without having to go through special elections.

CURRENT LAW requires that towns abide by the decision of property owners in the territory, with a 51 per cent favorable vote being required for annexation of areas larger than 60 acres.

A bill introduced yesterday by Schlickman would permit the courts to decide if a piece of property should be included within the corporate boundaries of a municipality.

Petitions for involuntary annexation would have to ensure that regional plans are satisfied and that full municipal services, including water, sewer, fire and police protection, are available for the area to be annexed.

The bill was referred for hearing to the house municipalities committee.

Hall Open Saturdays For Absentee Ballots

The Palatine Village Hall will be open every Saturday from now until the local election on April 15.

Residents who will be out of town on the day of election may vote by absentee ballot from 9 a.m. to noon on the coming Saturdays.

Village Deputy Clerk Mrs. June Boston said because she has received so many calls about absentee ballots the decision was made to have office hours on Saturdays.

Originally, the Village Hall was going to be open for absentee voting only the Saturday before the election on April 12.

Sewer Repairs

A sewer under Oriole Street settled off grade, and residents at 2605 were out of service temporarily.

Rolling Meadows public works department had to hire Rosetti Construction Co. to make emergency line repairs.

Supt. James McFeggan said the continued pounding of traffic on the street may have caused the underground line to finally settle with a back pitch.

Complains of Driver Using Lawn as Road

Mrs. J. Zurawski, 524 S. Allen, Palatine, told police that a vehicle drove across her front lawn causing ruts in her yard.

Mrs. Zurawski said the car came off Echo Lane and crossed to Elm Street. This has happened on three occasions, but this is the first time she has reported the incident, she said.

Upon investigation, police also found ruts on the lawn of Mrs. Zurawski's neighbor, Salvortie Tomaso, who lives at 555 Echo Lane.

Church Organ Recital Scheduled for Sunday

A special Lenten organ recital will be held at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Palatine Sunday.

Organists from three local churches will perform, cindlugin Donald Kendrick, St. Philip's Episcopal Church; Kenneth Spengler, Christ Lutheran Church and Drew Rutz of Immanuel Lutheran.

SELECTIONS include "Fanfare" by Lemmens, "Fugue in 9" by Bach, "Rock of Ages" by Bingham, "The Cross, Our True and Only Hope" by Penick, "Two Chorales" by Brahms, and "Praeludium" by Pachelbel.

The recital begins at 3 p.m. in Immanuel Lutheran Church on N. Plum Grove Road and Wood Street.

Y Invites Group-Use of Swim Facilities

The Countryside YMCA has invited youth groups in the area to use swimming facilities at Elgin Academy from 8:15 to 9:15 p.m., Thursday.

This is an extension of Family Swim, held on that day, which has proven popular with "Y" members.

Among the groups invited to use the Elgin Academy facilities, are the Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and Church Youth Groups. Interested groups may call the "Y" at 359-2400, for further information

Call U.N. Session

The U N Security Council is expected to meet this morning for the first time since last December after yesterday's Israeli bombing which Jordan claims killed 18 civilians and wounded 25

Israel conceded its planes entered Jordan but said they attacked a commando camp, not a civilian center

Charges 'Politics'

SPRINGFIELD— Democratic politicians reacting to Gov Richard Ogilvie's local government message said yesterday he has "chosen political power rather than effective government as his goal "

Senate Minority Leader Thomas McGloon said the governor's special message yesterday was the "most disappointing" in memory

Debt Hike Okayed

WASHINGTON - A $12 billion increase in the national debt was approved by the Senate yesterday It's enough to head off a mid-April fiscal crisis but is still short of the cushion requested by President Nixon

The bill boosts the "temporary" debt to $337 billion, enough to allow the government to pay its bills for another year.

Woman Gets Post

SPRINGFIELD- Mrs. Sharon Harker of Eureka yesterday was named superintendent of the county fair division of the Illinois Agricultural Department. She is the first woman to head a division in that department

Her division is responsible for distributing state funds to agricultural and industrial fairs throughout the state.

Charges Rickover

WASHINGTON— Vice Adm. Hyman Rickover yesterday was charged with persecuting nuclear submarine officers under his command. The charge was made by Charles Gubser, R-California, at a session of the House Armed Services Committee

He charged that the treatment is causing some officers to leave the service. Rickover, who was present, did not have the opportunity to reply.

Sales, Land Take Up Share

by GERRY DEZONNA

Property owners in Mount Prospect can expect a decrease in their real estate taxes for the new fiscal year, according to budget estimates made by the village's finance committee.

It is anticipated that taxpayers will pay $5 80 less than they pay now on real estate with a $10,000 assessed valuation. Property owners are currently contributing $35.40 per $10,000 assessed valuation to village coffers. The anticipated tax rate will be $29 60

The real estate tax levy may be reduced because the committee anticipates sufficient revenue from the sales tax and assessments on improved land in the community to meet the projected needs of the village.

THE FINANCE committee anticipates that the revenue from the sales tax is increasing between 7 and 10 per cent annually. Revenue from the assessments on improved land in the community has increased in the past year.

"The amount of vacant land in Mount Prospect is nominal now," explained Village Mgr. Robert Moore. "So the taxes on improved properties are sharing more of the tax load. This is one of the reasons why the real estate tax can be reduced."

The over-all budget for the village is also expected to be decreased to $17,951 less than last year's budget. Total operation costs for the village totaled $2,555,-351 in the last fiscal year, while expenditures this year can possibly be cut to $2,537,400.

The decrease in the over-all budget is due to a major cutback in the waterworks and sewage fund. This expenditure will be cut by approximately $185,000. Last year's budget allotted a large sum of money for a well and million-gallon water reservoir.

INCREASES IN THE budget that will offset the decrease in the sewage and waterworks fund include a $97,800 increase in the general corporate fund.

Most of the money in this fund will be used to cover anticipated salary increases, as well as finance capital expenditures such as engineering studies on storm water retention basins and traffic control studies.

The total budget is divided into 11 categories: general corporate, garbage collection service, street and bridge, civil defense, Illinois municipal retirement, the public benefit and the general obligation bond and interest funds.

The other categories include the police pension, firemen's pension, parking system revenue and the waterworks and sewage funds.

To this date, the finance committee has reviewed and approved all the categories in the budget except the general corporate, the street and bridge and the waterworks and sewage funds. Approval on these funds is pending a review of the anticipated salary increases for employes.

The finance committee is reviewing budget estimates for salary increases for the fire, police, and public works departments, as well as village personnel. Village personnel includes all the clerks, typists, secretaries and department heads employed by the village.

Once the finance committee has completed its review of anticipated salary increases, a recommendation for the final budget will be made to the village board of trustees, pending final approval.

It is expected that the finance committee will make its recommendation some time early in May.

Is Housing Law Good?

Mount Prospect's fair housing law has been a point of contention between Mayor Daniel Congreve and Trustee Robert Teichert since the issue was first raised.

Teichert opposed the passage of the law in Mount Prospect, while Congreve voted in favor of the matter.

In the ninth of a series of 10 questions posed to the two mayoral candidates, The Herald asked both Congreve and Teichert to "Give an example of how the village's present fair housing ordinance can be used effectively."

Their answers reflected the views of the two candidates . . Congreve still backing the issue, and Teichert maintaining that such a law is unnecessary in the village.

ALMOST LIKE homemade, the fresh and warm baked goods from local bakeries in the area draw scores of customers everyday who smell the sweet fragrances early in the morning from ovens that have been going since 2 a.m.

A NASA Location Sought

A search for 10,000 square feet of space initiated by Robert Waller, science curriculum coordinator for School Dist. 59, has been expanded to include the talents of State Rep. Gene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

The space, sought for a National Aeronautics and Space Administration exhibit of space hardware, and possibly geological specimens of the moon, is needed for six weeks early next year. It must have sufficient facilities to handle an expected attendance of 100,000 persons throughout the display month.

In an exhange of letters, Dr. Donald Thomas, district superintendent, said all arrangements have been made with NSA, but as yet there is no suitable facility available.

HE ASKED Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl, "If there is anything you could do to make it possible for us to use Arlington Park or an appropriate industrial site, we shall appreciate your help."

Arlington Park race track is preferred for the exhibit, but track management is reluctant to participate, Dist. 59 spokesman said.

Pahl passed the word on to Schlickman on Monday, with the note "Would you please get Arlington Park in this COG project?"

The Cook County Council of Government (COG) is supporting the planned exhibit.

Pahl also informed Thomas of the bid for Schlickman's help.

NEEDED IS a minimum of 10,000 square feet, with 17-foot ceilings, as well as adequate parking and other necessary facilities. The parking situation has eliminated most high school fieldhouses, in addition to the six week block of time needed during the school year.

Waller, who is heading up the local project, can be reached at the School Dist. 59 administration center. He noted that the exhibit is designed for about 40,000 area students, as well as the general public.

Aggrieved Get Relief

The fair housing ordinance presently in effect in the Village of Mount Prospect differs from the majority of local fair housing ordinances that have been adopted throughout the state in that it affords the aggrieved party immediate relief before a competent member of the judicial system of the Municipal Courts of Cook County.

It makes the discriminatory act a misdemeanor triable in the municipal court before a presiding magistrate, and therefore the complainant upon filing his complaint has an actual cause of action with remedies available through the courts.

This may be consummated over a short span of time as opposed to submitting the complainant to many hearings before advisory human relations boards, who in turn recommend to the board of trustees, who in turn recommend whether or not legal action through the courts should be pursued.

It was the determination of the corporate authorities of the Village of Mount Prospect that a complainant should be afforded an adequate, speedy remedy with respect to his alleged grievance, and, therefore, based on this rationale, this ordinance was adopted along the lines indicated — DANIEL CONGREVE

by MARTHA KOPER

It takes more than sugar and flour to bake that warm fresh sweet roll you eat in the morning on the way to the train or at the office.

It takes someone getting up in the middle of the night, mixing, molding, and baking in order to have a wide selection of high-calorie breakfasts awaiting the morning crowd that jams our local bakeries as early as 6 a.m.

Shops where fresh baked goods always can be found in the suburban area are not crying for business.

There's something magic about walking into a local bakery and knowing because of the sweet fragrance that the sweet rolls just came out of the oven. Local bakers know this too.

That's why they're in business and why they have become accustomed to working while their customers sleep.

AT THE PALATINE Pastry Shop, Joseph Seidl arrives at his store on Slade Street every morning about 2 a.m. He doesn't leave until three in the afternoon.

"It's nice to be going out at night when everybody else is asleep," he joked.

"After all, that's a baker's life."

And Seidl, who has made his living in a bakery for the past 32 years, certainly knows what a baker's life is like.

Bakers from other local stores closely follow Seidl's routine. Whether they begin work at midnight or 3 a.m. they end up working almost as many hours.

For an obvious reason, bakery owners make sure all their food is fresh in the morning. That's when the sweet fragrance is irresistible.

The majority of Seidl's customers from 6 to 9 a.m. are commuters rushing to the train, but with always enough time to stop at his little shop for a roll or doughnut.

"THAT'S WHY WE have to start baking at 2 a.m.," he said.

A baker's life means many long and unusual hours, but it also means enjoying the work.

"We have to like it, don't we?" asked a baker who specializes in decorating cakes.

There are all types of skills involved in a baker's job. Some of them come easier with years of experience.

Take Charles Danegger of Arlington Heights, who owns the Danegger Pastry Shop located in Arlington Market. He's been in the business for more than 35 years and can decorate a big wedding cake in less than a half hour.

His shop is a true family operation with his wife and son working many hours a day too. In fact, it's a third generation business since Danegger's father began in

Can't Make Welcome Mat from Law Suit

I cannot forsee any effective use of our fairhousing ordinance. Like the laws after which it was patterned, it can be used only to exact a fine as punishment. This produces headlines and animosity, but it does nothing to foster brotherhood or community participation.

In my opinion, our village is and always has been an open community. It has grown in a natural manner bringing together people with common goals and similar purposes.

Each of us defines our goals and purposes individually, and so long as the community is compatible with us, we remain a part of it.

I have never felt it necessary to analyze our community to ascertain our population breakdown as to races, nationalitites, or religions. Even if we did, I am not aware of any formula which sets forth the precise mixture of kinds of people that provide a good community.

I AM SURE that our village lacks many religions, many nationalities, and many races . . . I do not believe that their absence from the community means they are not welcome. Neither do I believe that their absence indicates that the community is "out of balance."

I believe strongly in the principle of housing open to all who wish to live here, and if this was not an open community, I would not remain here. I feel that people choose to live in a specific area not because a law allows it, but because the community welcomes them. No person, and no government, can fashion a welcome mat out of a law suit . . . and a law suit is all that the fairhousing ordinance can provide.

Whatever the natural growth of a community might be, it will be accepted by the people. Change in our community will continue to occur as it always has . . . but change attempted through use of a fairhousing ordinance is not a forseeable benefit.

The nature of human beings is to resist being forced to do something, and force under color of law is still force.

IF THERE SHOULD be instances of discrimination in the village, how will a law suit eradicate the discrimination? And what court can order neighbors to be friendly?

If there is any effectiveness in the fairhousing ordinance, it will not be in its use as a law, but rather that it was a vehicle for making people communicate. To treat the ordinance as an end in itself would be a disservice to the community. — ROBERT TEICHERT the bakery business before the turn of the century.

MRS. DANEGGER admits she never dreamed of becoming so closely associated with bakeries, but has no regrets.

"It's interesting work and we meet so many different people," she said.

It's a good feeling to step into a store and have the person behind the counter know what you want.

Indeed most customers know what they want too, because they frequently come just for the "specialty of the house."

At the Palatine Pastry Shop, customers are offered a choice of several German baked goods. As a matter of fact, Seidl started in the trade as a boy living in Germany.

When he came to the United States in the mid-1950's he quickly learned there is a difference between European and American baking.

"AMERICANS WANT everything a little richer," he smiled, "and everything has to look nice."

In Europe, the customers don't care too much about how the food looks, as long as it tastes good," he explained.

"When we bake American, we use more butter," Seidl smiled.

But maybe it's the frequent visits to local bakeries and not the butter that makes Americans look like the best-fed population of the world.

HOORAY! The school bus broke down. Boo! It was after school. A group of students from Juliette Low School (which burned earlier this year) faced a less catastropic hang-up yesterday afternoon. The bus bringing them home from Jay School backed into the mud and refused to budge. The bus was stranded on Golf Road west of Route 62. Students were transferred to another bus to complete the trip.

Set 'Patriotic' Concert

The Music Department at Prospect High School expects a full house for the Winter Band Concert Saturday in the Little Theater.

The two concert bands are having a ticket selling contest which will culminate in a party after school Monday for the band with the most tickets sold per capita. Tickets, 50 cents and $1, may be bought at the door.

Featured at the concert will be trombone soloist, Roger Janssen. He will play two numbers, "The Blue Bells of Scotland" and "Concerto for Trombone," accompanied by the Symphonic Band.

Sterling Mische, choral director at Prospect, will narrate a new composition, "Duty, Honor, Country," a collection of American songs, to begin the concert. Continuing with the patriotic theme, the Symphonic Band will play "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by John Philip Sousa.

MORGEN JONES, director, whose grandfather knew Sousa, says that this will be played like the bands at the turn of the century played it — slowly and in strict tempo. Newer pieces, including "Chester" and "Fanfare and Allegro," will be played by the Symphonic Band. The Concert Band will play "King Cotton" among their seven numbers.

Also performing at the Winter Concert will be Prospect's newly acclaimed stage band. The highlight of their performance will be a chart composed by January graduate, George Andoniadis called "Transpiral."

After the concert, the music makers and their parents will move to the cafeteria for an informal reception. Senior band members will receive carnations to wear as they enjoy the refreshments.

Honors at Wheaton

Wheaton College has awarded scholastic honors for the first semester to two Mount Prospect youths.

They are David G. Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Foster of 401 S. George, a senior, and James B. Bever, a junior, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bever of 402 N. Russell.

Chief Sees No Other Likely Cause

Arson is the probable cause of a fire last night which destroyed an empty barn at the corner of Hintz and Arlington Heights roads.

The fire was reported at about 7:30 p.m. Two trucks and 10 men were sent to contain the blaze.

"I would say it was definitely arson," said Fire Chief Harvey Carrothers.

"There was nothing else around to start the fire. There was no electrical wiring and the ground was wet," he said.

Police have not yet found a suspect.

A house on the same property was destroyed by fire about a month ago.

"I definitely thing somebody burned both buildings," Carrothers said.

The Arlington Heights department was aided by a squad car from Buffalo Grove which helped direct traffic. Two other patrol cars later reached the scene, but arrothers didn't know where they came from

The property, at 2403 N. Arlington Heights Road, known as the Boi farm, is owned by Mort Deutsch, a builder who planned to develop the area for single-family housing.

3-H Builders formerly held an option on the land but gave it up when apartment rezoning was denied.

There was no official damage estimate on the fire because the barn was scheduled for demolition, according to Carrothers.

The Rock Road Consruction Co. applied last week for a wrecking permit to raze the building. Carrothers said he didn't know if it had been granted.

There were no injuries in the blaze

A NASA Location Sought

A search for 10,000 square feet of space initiated by Robert Waller, science curriculum coordinator for School Dist. 59, has been expanded to include the talents of State Rep. Gene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

The space, sought for a National Aeronautics and Space Administration exhibit of space hardware, and possibly geological specimens of the moon, is needed for six weeks early next year. It must have sufficient facilities to handle an expected attendance of 100,000 persons throughout the display month

In an exhange of letters, Dr. Donald Thomas, district superintendent, said all arrangements have been made with NSA, but as yet there is no suitable facility available.

HE ASKED Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl, "If there is anything you could do to make it possible for us to use Arlington Park or an appropriate industrial site, we shall appreciate your help."

Arlington Park race track is preferred for the exhibit, but track management is reluctant to participate, Dist. 59 spokesman said.

Pahl passed the word on to Schlickman on Monday, with the note "Would you please get Arlington Park in this COG project?"

The Cook County Council of Government (COG) is supporting the planned exhibit.

Pahl also informed Thomas of the bid for Schlickman's help.

NEEDED IS a minimum of 10,000 square feet, with 17-foot ceilings, as well as adequate parking and other necessary facilities. The parking situation has eliminated most high school fieldhouses, in addition to the six week block of time needed during the school year.

Waller, who is heading up the local project, can be reached at the School Dist. 59 administration center. He noted that the exhibit is designed for about 40,000 area students, as well as the general public.

Candidates Put on the Line

Candidates for Arlington Heights park and village boards last night found themselves hit with a barrage of some of the sharpest questions they have faced this campaign.

Attending a candidates' night sponsored by the Arlington Heights League of Women Voters, incumbents and challengers alike found themselves forced to define their platforms and pinned to their own weaknesses.

Charles Zeller, independent candidate for village president, Tom McShane and Jack Edwards, candidates for park board, all found themselves challenged by the audience.

Zeller, who repeatedly during the campaign has failed to say much about Arlington Heights and who has often run afoul of time limits, found himself asked, "For 3½ minutes you talked about yourself — fine. But what are you going to do for Arlington Heights?"

Zeller replied with some of his ideas for federal financing of a downtown transportation center. but before he could finish, ran out of time and concluded, "and so forth."

Answering a later question on the consolidation of Northwest suburban towns, Zeller again attempted to answer, was faced with a time limit sign and sat down with an "Oh, so long."

McShane was asked if he would please better describe what he would do as a parks commissioner, a question he answered with the vaguely specific references to attracting qualified recreation supervisors and building an image for Arlington Heights through the parks.

Edwards was then asked, "Answer Mr. McShane, why will it cost $70 for a (family activities summer) pass?"

Edwards explained that the swimming pass would cost only $20 for the summer but that additional activities which were free under the old pass would now be added at extra cost.

This, he said, is necessary because those who signed up for swimming in the past frequently did not participate in the free activities program and thus prohibited others from doing so.

Independent trustee candidates Mrs. Barbara Vidmar and Mrs. Jean Hanlon found themselves under attack by a Caucus Party village president candidate John Walsh for failing "to offer a single positive suggestion or program for this village."

Both cited an alleged failure on the part of the current village board to respond to the wishes of village residents.

Sewer, Paving On BOLI Agenda

Arlington Heights Board of Local Improvements (BOLI) will discuss two projects, a relief sewer for the Greenbrier area and the paving of Belmont and Douglas Avenues, at its meeting tonight.

BOLI's meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Road.

Greenbrier's relief sewer would serve the northwest section of the village. Acting upon advice from engineers, BOLI slated the project high on its list of priorities for this year.

THE PROPOSED sewer would relieve a present pumping station which is not able to handle any additional volume.

As more developers come into the area, the pumping station would be taxed beyond capacity. Trying to keep a step ahead of development, BOLI will hear the progress of the project during the meeting.

Sculpture Is Memorial

A copper sculpture of sailboats at Westgate School now serves as a permanent memorial to Donna Pomponio.

A former teacher at the Arlington Heights school, Miss Pomponio, 24, died in a freak sailing accident last October in the Philippines. The brass tip of her boat mast touched a high voltage wire stretched across Subic Bay and she and a friend were electrocuted.

FORMER STUDENTS and teachers at Westgate School contributed for the memorial, entitled "Regatta," which hangs in the entry hall.

A 1966 graduate of Marquette University in Wisconsin, Miss Pomponio attended Regina Dominican High School in Chicago and St. James Elementary School in Arlington Heights.

Following a term of teaching at Westgate School, she went to the Philippines to teach children of Navy and Air Force dependents.

Mrs. Helen Castor, Westgate principal, describes the former teacher as a "really delightful and exceptional person."

Vandal, Drug Crimes Up

The amount of crime in Arlington Heights in February stayed relatively stable, compared with February, 1968 — but two common youthful offenses, vandalism and narcotics, increased sharply for the second month in a row.

The monthly crime report, just released by the Arlington Heights Police Dept., shows 553 offenses in February — compared to 556 in February, 1968, and 469 in January.

Vandalism offenses climbed sharply in February, as 72 incidents were reported to police, compared to 40 in January and 45 in February, 1968.

NARCOTICS offenses, a major concern in the village, along with vandalism, showed a sharp increase. Four narcotics offenses were reported in February, compared with only two in February, 1968. The four raised the 1968 total to seven, compared with only two at the same time last year.

Burglary and larceny, however, declined in activity in February. Fifteen cases of burglary were reported in February, raising the total for 1969 to 27 — or 33 less than at the same time last year.

Larceny slumped, too, from 99 to 89 for the first two months of 1969. A total of 52 cases were reported for February of this year.

Water System Can't Serve Proposal

The developers of a $1 million high-rise apartment project just north of downtown Arlington Heights learned last night that the village water system in the area cannot supply enough water for their proposed project.

The village is planning to install a 12-inch water main this summer to meet the added needs of the area, according to a letter from Al Saunders, acting village engineer.

The project in question was up for approval last night before the Arlington Heights Plan Commission.

Attorney Fred Weber told the commission that the development would not add to existing traffic congestion because the developer plans to widen streets in the area.

He also said he didn't believe the apartment would lower property values.

Weber, who looked hollow-eyed after recent surgery, is the attorney for the firm that developed another high-rise project at 1 N. Chestnut St. on the western edge of the central business district.

The Babbin-Trieger property had been considered initially by the plan commission Feb. 12. However, a final decision on the rezoning and planned development was delayed to permit the commission time to study a water and storm sewer.

Robert Babbin and Norman Trieger, the petitioners, sought rezoning from R-3 to R-6. The property is located at 211, 213 and 215 W. Fremont, to the west of the new library, and at 401 and 407 N. Chestnut.

The high-rise apartment, as planned by the developers, would include 22 one-bedroom, 20 two-bedroom, and six three-bedroom units. Rental would run from $225 to $425, depending on the size of the apartment.

Several residents from the area complained at the last hearing that the building could create a traffic problem. One man complained that his neighborhood streets already were unable to hold present traffic.

Other questions raised in February concerned the structure of the balconies, screening to protect the area and flooding.

Futurities

ALMOST LIKE homemade, the fresh and warm baked goods from local bakeries in the area draw scores of customers everyday who smell the sweet fragrances early in the morning from ovens that have been going since 2 a.m.

Bakers Help Make Life Richer

by MARTHA KOPER

It takes more than sugar and flour to bake that warm fresh sweet roll you eat in the morning on the way to the train or at the office.

It takes someone getting up in the middle of the night, mixing, molding, and baking in order to have a wide selection of high-calorie breakfasts awaiting the morning crowd that jams our local bakeries as early as 6 a.m.

Shops where fresh baked goods always can be found in the suburban area are not crying for business.

There's something magic about walking into a local bakery and knowing because of the sweet fragrance that the sweet rolls just came out of the oven. Local bakers know this too.

That's why they're in business and why they have become accustomed to working while their customers sleep.

AT THE PALATINE Pastry Shop, Joseph Seidl arrives at his store on Slade Street every morning about 2 a.m. He doesn't leave until three in the afternoon.

"It's nice to be going out at night when everybody else is asleep," he joked.

"After all, that's a baker's life."

And Seidl, who has made his living in a bakery for the past 32 years, certainly knows what a baker's life is like.

Bakers from other local stores closely follow Seidl's routine. Whether they begin work at midnight or 3 a.m. they end up working almost as many hours.

For an obvious reason, bakery owners make sure all their food is fresh in the morning That's when the sweet fragrance is irresistible.

The majority of Seidl's customers from 6 to 9 a.m. are commuters rushing to the train, but with always enough time to stop at his little shop for a roll or doughnut.

"THAT'S WHY WE have to start baking at 2 a.m.," he said.

A baker's life means many long and unusual hours, but it also means enjoying the work.

"We have to like it, don't we?" asked a baker who specializes in decorating cakes.

There are all types of skills involved in a baker's job. Some of them come easier with years of experience.

Take Charles Danegger of Arlington Heights, who owns the Danegger Pastry Shop located in Arlington Market. He's been in the business for more than 35 years and can decorate a big wedding cake in less than a half hour.

His shop is a true family operation with his wife and son working many hours a day too. In fact, it's a third generation business since Danegger's father began in the bakery business before the turn of the century.

MRS. DANEGGER admits she never dreamed of becoming so closely associated with bakeries, but has no regrets.

"It's interesting work and we meet so many different people," she said.

It's a good feeling to step into a store and have the person behind the counter know what you want.

Indeed most customers know what they want too, because they frequently come just for the "specialty of the house."

At the Palatine Pastry Shop, customers are offered a choice of several German baked goods. As a matter of fact, Seidl started in the trade as a boy living in Germany.

When he came to the United States in the mid-1950's he quickly learned there is a difference between European and American baking.

"AMERICANS WANT everything a little richer." he smiled, "and everything has to look nice."

In Europe, the customers don't care too much about how the food looks, as long as it tastes good," he explained.

"When we bake American, we use more butter," Seidl smiled.

But maybe it's the frequent visits to local bakeries and not the butter that makes Americans look like the best-fed population of the world.

Seller Bills Move On

Legislation that would permit municipalities to control door-to-door solicitors was reported out of the municipalities committee of the Illinois House of Representatives yesterday with the recommendation that it be passed.

Two bills, HB 107 and 108, were introduced in the current session of the legislature by Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, granting local government the power to license and regulate direct sellers, a power heretofore denied municipalities by the state government.

THE SCHLICKMAN bills would permit direct sellers to either "register with the Department of Registration and Education or be subject to any municipal licensing or regulation."

The department is authorized to revoke or suspend solicitor permits based on certain guidelines, the same guidelines set down for municipalities.

Supporting the legislation in testimony before the municipalities committee were Steve Sargent, executive director of the Illinois Municipal League, Robert Van Deusen and Wayne Anderson, managers of Glenview and Evanston, Harold Ross of Field Enterprises and Ernest Wittle, plant manager for the Avon Co.

In other action yesterday, Gov. Richard Ogilvie delivered a nine-point special message on local government, each point of which will be provided with enabling legislation.

The fifth point of the message, of particular interest to the suburban Northwest, would enable municipalities to annex immediately contiguous territory without having to go through special elections.

CURRENT LAW requires that towns abide by the decision of property owners in the territory, with a 51 per cent favorable vote being required for annexation of areas larger than 60 acres.

A bill introduced yesterday by Schlickman would permit the courts to decide if a piece of property should be included within the corporate boundaries of a municipality.

Petitions for involuntary annexation would have to ensure that regional plans are satisfied and that full municipal services, including water, sewer, fire and police protection, are available for the area to be annexed.

The bill was referred for hearing to the house municipalities committee.

Cana Conference Head To Discuss Marriage

The Rev. Walter Imbiorski, director of the Cana Conference of Chicago, will discuss "Marriage in the Changing World" at a public forum at 8 p.m. Thursday at St. Zachary's Church in Mount Prospect.

REVEREND IMBIORSKI, author and theologist, has published several pamphlets and books on marriage and family life. His writings include "Beginning," "Your Child's Sex Life" and "The Cana Manual."

He is currently writing a pamphlet on "Becoming a Person," a study of personality development and sex education for grade school students.

Admission to the forum is 50 cents per person.

Hospital Likes Service

As far as officials from Northwest Community Hospital are concerned, there's no problem with ambulance service in Arlington Heights.

"We don't see any real problem with the service. The drivers are well trained and most cooperative," Malcom MacCoun, executive vice president of the hospital, told the Herald.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS said that, as far as they can determine, Haire and Haire and Lauterburg and Oehler, the two funeral homes that supply ambulance service in the village, work closely with the police and are prompt and well-trained.

Mrs. Charles Mallon, head nurse in the emergency room for almost 10 years, is completely satisfied with the service, according to Jack Ryan, director of public relations at the hospital.

The hospital's response came after several candidates for office in the village charged that ambulance service in the village is inadequate and said a fire ambulance would be desirable to serve the community.

Scratching NMAD Is Out

Disconnection of Palatine from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD) is not considered the solution to the village's mosquito problems.

That's the conclusion of a special village committee appointed to investigate the reason behind swarms of the pesty insects plaguing the village last summer.

In its 18-page report, the group said it would not be advisable to disconnect or dissolve the district.

"A great deal more interest and support would be necessary to accomplish this action properly," it was explained.

BUT BASED on the conclusion that taxes have been paid toward a "mosquito abatement program that has become ineffective and is operated as a temporary control program," the committee said a legal tax protest would be in order

The committee further recommends that fogging (a temporary control measure) of the adult mosquito be done only upon request of village officials

Study by Palatine's committee, which is headed by Mrs Clayton Brown, has included attendance at six of the past eight monthly meetings of NMAD and three meetings with Judge Harry Comerford, who is responsible for appointing trustees to the district

IN ADDITION, the group has done research into recognized effective control methods of mosquitoes. The members also requested financial and activity reports from NMAD

The report emphasized Palatine's committee made 11 official requests for a treasurer's report before it was received.

So the group also is recommending an investigation by the Better Government Association with regard to finance reports.

Other recommendations to Palatine's village board include

Legislation to amend the Mosquito Abatement Act regarding the manner by which appointments are made to the board.

—A request from the village and township government to NMAD for minutes of monthly meetings.

—Appointment by the village of an "observer" to attend meetings of NMAD and request the League of Women Voters also to appoint an "observer."

—The village and township government should request exact information as to the agency responsible for mosquito abatement operations of creeks, streams, rivers, natural lakes and reservoirs.

—The report made by the Palatine committee be made available to all municipalities in NMAD.

A BASIC conclusion of the committee is that there is no control over actions of the mosquito district.

"Until there is some legislation to correct the method by which trustees are selected to serve on this board, we have a form of taxation without representation," the committee reported.

Palatine's village board decided to schedule a committee-of-the-whole session in order to thoroughly review the lengthy report and discuss future official action.

Trustee Wendell Jones said, "The committee is to be commended for such a thorough analysis of the problem."

Other members of the mosquito committee include Richard Dawson, Palatine director of environmental health; Mrs. Martha Loss, Dist. 15 director of health services; and Earl Dailey, a research chemist for Charles Bruning Co. Township Supervisor Howard Olsen also participated in the group's study.

Says Ballots 'Hard To Get'

Absentee ballots for the April 1 Arlington Heights Village elections are too hard to come by, according to Mrs. Betty Revard, Caucus Party candidate for village clerk.

"More than a few villagers have complained to me about existing confusion and inconvenience in obtaining their absentee ballots," Mrs. Revard said in a statement issued yesterday.

"Earlier in the month, some people were told to come back later because the ballots were not available, although they should have been on hand since March second."

CHARGING THAT the incumbent clerk, Mrs. Jeanne Novotny, who is seeking reelection, should have foreseen the problem in time to cope with it, Mrs. Revard said, "Her office has been open on only one Saturday, March 22, and that was for only two hours.

"That opening was hastily announced three days in advance and was apparently caused by campaign pressure," Mrs. Revard continued. "Why wasn't this service extended to voters on Saturday, March 8, and Saturday, March 15, as well?"

Mrs. Revard suggests that a consolidation of voting places could be accomplished for absentee voters who currently must vote separately at the municipal building, the park district office and township headquarters.

Charge Driver With 4 Counts

A 48-year-old Lombard man collided with two cars in separate incidents a minute apart Tuesday night at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Central roads, and was charged with four violations by Arlington Heights police

Chester Hamilton was charged with driving while intoxicated, driving too fast for conditions, leaving the scene of an accident and running a red light.

His court date is set for April 23.

THE FIRST ACCIDENT occurred at 9:58 p.m. when Hamilton reportedly struck the car driven by Dorothy C. Italia, 41, 314 Beverly Lane, Mount Prospect, as she was stopped at a red light.

Hamilton then wheeled his car around the damaged auto and made a left turn against the red light and into oncoming traffic, which had a green light, police said. His car then side-swiped the car driven by Leonard J. Smith, 50, 524 Germaine Lane, Elk Grove, police reported.

There were no injuries reported in either incident.

Park Contract Bids On Tonight's Agenda

Arlington Heights Park Board will hold a special meeting tonight to discuss awarding of contracts for park development.

The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez.

BEFORE CONTRACTS can be awarded for the construction at 10 park sites, board members will have to decide how to cut down the costs because bids for the development came in higher than the budgeted amounts.

A decision on awarding of contracts is expected at the meeting.

40 Participate in First Fair

More than 40 students were at Wheeling High School before 7 a m Saturday morning to get an early start on setting up their projects for the North Suburban District Science Fair.

By 9 a m , when the judging started, there were 440 students from high schools and junior high schools from Northern Cook County and all of Lake County.

By the end of the day an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 students, judges, and visitors had crowded the Wheeling fieldhouse. They were anxious to view the projects from this area which might win the state finals in Champaign Area winners included Jerry Rosenquist who won an outstanding award for Wheeling High School, and Clyde Kessel who won a similar award for Hersey High School.

THE STUDENTS ALSO vied for awards presented by four companies — Welsh Scientific, Cenco, Stansi, and Bruning and Co.

To attend the state finals from this area in addition to the two winners named above are Fred Klink of Elk Grove High School. David Haney, Jim Poe and Steven Carson of Hersey High School.

Wheeling took the greater number of area honors, however with eight students being sent to the finals

Wheeling winners who will go to Champaign include Randall Ashton, Gary Baney, Leroy Fabian, Andrew Roberts, Roger Stringham, Cindy Keyes, David Benley and Dave Bruning.
